

that the feeling has been sufficiently mutual to induce you to come amongst us again? It is for me to think that a person we have known & esteemed so much, will never visit us again, <sup>so</sup> that I never determined to banish all such reflections from my mind & give myself up to the pleasing hope of one more visit from you under my own roof. I only wish I could promise that you should not be the most assailable of those who are now with me, but alas!
