

printed is nearly exhausted; and though the demand now is not very considerable, we should not hesitate to speculate on a reprint if you could furnish us with any additional matter on the subject. I thought I would take the liberty of asking this question, as it was probable you may not have enlarged so fully on the Esphor drama, as you would have done had your work been originally intended for England.

I shall be extremely gratified to hear from you on this subject; and happy to avail myself of any suggestions you may make, and any materials you may think proper to contribute for a new edition.

I have the honor to remain
Sir

Your faithful & obliged Servant
Robt. B. Darwin