Not finding any account of my publications in the Jena review, as I had reason to expect from your obliging promise at Dresden, I beg you will do me the favour of returning Prof. Spalding's critique of the last of them that it may be inserted in some other journal. I am equally obliged to you for your kind intentions; - but, why Mr. Schütz took no notice of the above critique, nor admits your intended one, is a riddle I forbear enquiring into. - I remain, with great esteem, Sir.

Your obedient & able servant
