2. * The Poets Pleasaunce; or, Garden of all sorts of Pleasant Flowers which our Pleasant Poets have in Past Time for Pastime planted: with the right ordering of them. By Eden Warwick. Square crown 8vo. with numerous Illustrations engraved on Wood . . .

 This work has originated in the idea of combining and concentrating in one volume some of the richest passages, most elegant fancies, and most beautiful sentiments, connected with wellknown and favourite flowers, that lie scattered throughout the wide field of British Poetry — the thoughts and meditations of Shakspeare, Milton, Spenser etc. — upon these beautiful productions of nature.

The pictorial portion of the work consists of border illustrations enclosing this „true poetry of flowers“ in an appropriate frame, composed in each instance of the flower treated of, and enriched with insects in their various stages, and other objects naturally associating themselves with the plant.

The taste of the beginning of the sixteenth century has been selected by the author of the designs as the key or feeling upon which they are composed, in emulation of the rich books that formed the glory of that period.

3. * The Miracles of our Saviour. Profusely Illuminated on every page with elaborate Borderings of original and appropriate design. In a binding of novel character, designed and modelled expressly for this work . . .

 The plan of the work may be shortly explained as follows: — In the decoration of this volume, the principal intention of the Illuminator has been (as in his previous work, the illumination of „The Parables“) to render his designs original and novel in general effect, and applicable in their general character, as far as possible, to the subject of each page decorated; it has also formed part of his plan to introduce a series of such specimens of the Old Masters of the art of Illumination as could be introduced without injuring the unity of effect of his own design: with this view, he has selected a series of detached figures from the works of the old Illuminators, especially those of the Apostles, — ideals, which, embodied by such designers as the „nameless author“ whose works bear the date 1466, — by Martin Schoengauer, — by Cranach, — by Israel von Mechenen, — by Lucas von Leyden, — and by Albert Durer and Raphael, cannot fail to form a very interesting suite of samples of early art devoted to sacred purposes. In short, to blend such a series of examples into one harmonious series of decorative borderings, original in general composition and effect, and homogeneous in style and feeling, notwithstanding the admixture of extraneous features, has formed the plan of the present effort of the Illuminator. — A fuller account of the materials employed, and the intention of their application, will be appended to the volume, in the form of a descriptive Index.
