

ib. m.

Handwritten text in a historical script, likely German or Latin, occupying the left column. The text is densely written and includes various words and phrases, some with diacritics or special characters.

Handwritten text in a historical script, likely German or Latin, occupying the right column. The text continues the discourse from the left column and includes similar script and punctuation.

Handwritten text at the bottom of the right column, appearing as a separate entry or a closing phrase.

