

Handwritten text in a Gothic script on the left page, forming the first column of a ledger. The text is densely packed and includes various numbers and names, though difficult to decipher due to the cursive style.

Handwritten text in a Gothic script on the right page, forming the second column of a ledger. Similar to the left page, it contains dense handwritten entries, likely related to the same accounting or record-keeping system.

