The father of the jar; the brother of a neighbor; the pallace of the prince; a tutor of a boy. Give the money to a cook and to the physician. Tell to the merchant and to a tailor. The speech of my friend.

I have seen to-day the sister of the queen, the husband's lover more (the) wine than his wife.
From God we receive our bread. He is arrived yesterday from London and to-morrow I will see him at Sturabury. He has spoken very much of his ancestry. Have you heard the news of an old woman.

Communion at St. Paul.

3.

I have seen many churches and of the crapper in them I will tell you. I like to eat fishes and (I) have bought ^{only} blue boxes, Calves are devoured by wolves. The robbers have stabbed the woman with knives.

(I like eating fishes)

4.

Assurance.

One cannot play with one die; you must have three dice. In my house are many mice and my (?) spiders will catch them. The feathers of geese use the ^{ways} and particularly the ^{women}.
The oxen are (butchered) and eaten. No body can go without feet. ^{were} There was a tower part a walled town. I saw yesterday a new pair of bellows - with my neighbours, who possess great money and have many businesses - I like more to eat daily cheese than that from Switzerland.

Don't get off to Munich.

5.

The sun shone yesterday and he was red; the moon is smaller than the day, though she seems greater. In the street lies a stone; it is very hard. I have bought butter; it melts now.
I shall send you a man servant and he shall say to the maid servant, what she must do. The female goat is more useful, than the male.
This afternoon the count and the countess will come.

Have my word in Adjectiv.

Our maid servant is stupider (more stupid) than our man servant, who is the most stupid of all men servants I know. His father was the fattest peasant and his mother the clearest country-woman, whom I have seen in my life. My friend is more diligent, than the most diligent scholar (scholar) in your school and he is more learned, than his brother. The clock was brought in our stage. You are our most obedient servant.

7.

Your children are stronger than the wife; but the little Friederich is the strongest and the fair girl the loveliest. If worked, he might be able in this matter; then he would be happier. The women must be more frugal, than the husbands. Your apples are good, however the wine are better and perhaps the best. See in wine, than the worst among you. Most of men are left, than this soldier.
