CAMPING WITH PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

John Burroughs, the well-known nature writer, gives some entertaining glimpses of President Roosevelt in the current "Atlantic." He accompanied him on his trip to Yellowstone Park, where they lived the "simple life" for some weeks. The President was intensely interested in the fauna of the cañons. "I found his interest in bird life very keen, and his eye and ear remarkably quick. He usually saw the bird or heard its note as quickly as I did—and I had nothing else to think about, and had been teaching my eye and ear the trick of it for over fifty years."

One day the word came to the tents that a band of mountain sheep were coming down a wall of trap rock. The President, with coat off and a towel around his neck, was shaving. One side of his face was half shaved and the other side lathered. "By Jove," said the President, "I must see that. The shaving can wait, and the sheep won't." So on he went, as he was, hatless, coatless, and saw the sight.

One night in camp the President told the story of one of his Rough Riders who had just written him from some place in Arizona. The Rough Riders, wherever they are now, look to him in time of trouble. This one had come to grief in Arizona. He was in gaol. So he wrote the President, and his letter ran something like this: "Dear Colonel,—I am in trouble. I shot a lady in the eye, but I did not intend to hit the lady; I was shooting at my wife!" And the presidential laughter rang out over the tree-tops.

The President related how, in a frontier hotel, he saw a room full of men terrorised by a half-drunken ruffian, who stood in the middle of the floor, compelling them to treat. "I went and sat down behind the stove as far from him as I could get, and hoped to escape his notice. The fact that I wore glasses, together with my evident desire to avoid a fight, apparently gave him the impression that I could be imposed upon with impunity. He very soon approached me, flourishing his two guns, and ordered me to treat. I made no reply for some moments, when the fellow became so threatening that I saw something had to be done. The crowd, mostly sheep-herders and small grangers, sat or stood back against the wall, afraid to move. I was unarmed, and thought rapidly. Saying, 'Well, if I must I must,' I got up as if to walk around him to the bar, then, as I got opposite him, I wheeled and fetched him as heavy a blow on the chinpoint as I could strike. He went down like a steer before the axe, firing both guns into the ceiling as he went. I jumped on him, and with my knees on his chest, disarmed him in a hurry. The crowd was then ready enough to help me, and we hog-tied him and put him in an outhouse."

PARIS TAXES.

Paris is face to face with a great revenue question. The octroi system of the city has enjoyed that longevity which is said to attach to most threatened lives, but if reports be true, it is really doomed this time. Its suppression is said to be only a question of a few months at most. This will mean a loss to the city of four and a half millions a year, and the question of the day is—how to raise it by other means. Two schemes are before the municipal council, both of them marked by features which to an English mind seem fantastic, but which appear likely to receive serious discussion. The curious feature of one project is a proposed tax on house removals. The other contemplates neither more nor less than what the Zulus would call a hut tax, from which not the poorest hovel in Paris would escape.

St. Petersburg, May 22. In yesterday's sitting of the Duma, M. Korniloff proposed, as the first business of the day, to discuss a project of law for the release of all political prisoners. As the project had been distributed the discussion need only occupy a short time. The President said that he knew nothing of the project, perhaps the distribution had been effected privately. Moreover, the debate on the amnesty question would not be carried on now, as the majority appeared to be opposed to it.

An article by M. Suvorin, which threw light on the amnesty question and on the utterances of several of the speakers in last night's sitting of the Duma, was the subject of much comment. The article protests, from the standpoint of policy, against anarchy and systematised murder, as well as against the defence of these crimes. The Duma, by its attitude, was indirectly giving its assent to the tactics of murder and political brigandage, was approving in a certain sense of anarchy, and was appearing to use anarchy as a support in its attacks upon the Government, since only 78 members had joined the 5 protesting against their decision. This article produced a deep impression. M. Schipoff, and the President of the Committee of the Warsaw Exchange M. Krestofnikoff, two Members of the Imperial Council, said that the Council is endeavouring to avoid a conflict with the Duma, in spontaneously renouncing the initiative in legislation.
