THE WEATHER ON THE CONTINENT.

The weather continues to be very wintry throughout Europe, abnormally heavy snowfalls being reported from various districts.

In the Black Forest and other parts of the Baden Uplands heavy falls of snow have occurred. Between Titisee and Hintergarten a locomotive was derailed in a snow drift. At Neueck snow is lying 8 feet deep. Quantities of snow have fallen in many districts of France especially in the Department of Doubs and in the Jura district.

Traffic remains much interrupted in Berlin owing to the deep snow. The municipal authorities employed over 2,000 men in clearing the streets on Thursday. The removal of the snow will involve an outlay of 50,000 marks.

There is a lack of poultry, vegetables and eggs in the market, since the peasants of the outlying districts are unable to reach the market. The masses of snow in the city are the result of several distinct storms coming from various directions. Still, curiously enough, outside Berlin, snow is lying only on the uplands and in the woods.

KING EDWARD TO VISIT PARIS.

London, January 31.

Reuter's Bureau announces that Their Majesties the King and Queen, when they leave for the Continent on Saturday, will probably only go as far as Paris; in that case King Edward will stay at the British Embassy, and Queen Alexandra with Lady de Grey.

Later.

It is officially announced that the King and Queen will reside in the British Embassy during their stay in Paris; they will remain incognito as the Duke and Duchess of Lancaster.

THE NORTH EAST DERBY ELECTIONS.

London, January 31.

The North East Derby election has resulted in the return of Mr. Harvay (Radical and Labour) who defeated Dr. G. Court (Unionist) by a majority of 629. The vacancy was caused by the death of Mr. D. R. Bolton (Radical) who won the seat at the general election by a majority of 1,769. On the present occasion the Unionist vote was higher than ever before, but Mr. Harvay polled a thousand votes less than Mr. Bolton in 1906.

TERRIBLE SHOOTING FATALITY.

London, January 31.

Lady Dorothy Anna Cuthbert, daughter of the Earl of Strathford, and wife of Capt. Harold Cuthbert, D. S. O., was accidentally shot at a pheasant shoot in the grounds of Beaufront Castle, Hexham, her husband's residence.

NEWS FROM AMERICA.

UNITED STATES AND CUBA.

New York, January 31.

The Herald, which has from the first been distinguished by the zeal and persistency with which it has advocated an American Protectorate in Cuba, has just published an interview with Señor Palma, in which the ex-President is reported to have given his approval to such a solution. The interview makes interesting reading, but it has fallen somewhat flat, because most people here have already made up their minds that this country's present hold upon Cuba will never be relaxed.

The Cuban Liberals assert that they entered into some sort of an agreement with Mr. Taft while that gentleman was keeping the peace in Havana, in which he pledged the word and honour of the United States to withdraw its armed forces from Cuba as soon as the elections had taken place and order had been everywhere restored. No proof has been furnished of this claim, and it is regarded as extremely improbable that Mr. Taft would have gone out of his way to give such a pledge without instructions direct and unmistakable from Washington. General assurances have been given that the United States will withdraw from the Island as soon as there is a Cuban Government in power with the consent of the majority of the people and able and willing to maintain law and order.

For the rest, the situation has not materially changed. An American Protectorate is still regarded as the certain solution of all the difficulties existing and to come. The Herald, which has had an able special correspondent investigating the situation on the spot, claims to have furnished proof that the large majority of the Cubans themselves would greatly prefer such a solution. "I have," he says, "visited men of all ranks and conditions in town and country, and all are weary of the strife. They care nothing for politics, and want the assurance of security and peace under the protection of the United States."

THE SITUATION IN VENEZUELA.

The news of fighting at Caracas is thought to indicate the early commencement of the long-delayed revolution in Venezuela. Despite all official assertions to the contrary, President Castro is still too ill to take the field against his rivals. He is surrounded by men whom he cannot trust, and several of his former professed adherents to the death have already deserted him. It is impossible to make out for the moment which of the several aspirants to the Presidency is at present in a position to take the field, but the position is likely to become clearer in the course of the next few days.

NEWS FROM FRANCE.

THE INCIDENT IN THE CHAMBER.

St. Petersburg, January 31.

The journals all discuss in detail yesterday's incident in the Chamber. Most of them regard it as a sign that the harmony of the Cabinet is somewhat disturbed. M. Jaurès, in the Humanité, writes that there is certainly a rift in the Ministry, which may, perhaps, be healed but can easily become wider. The Cabinet will only recover its power of action if it carries out its reform policy with decision and especially if it answers the declaration of the Bishops by a Law that shall be final.

THE CABINET COUNCIL.

Paris, January 31.

At today's Cabinet Council M. Briand and M. Caillaux were charged with the examination of the question as to who shall acquire gifts and bequests now employed for ecclesiastical purposes, in cases where no associations culturelles exist.

The Minister of Marine, M. Thomson, announced that the disaster to the submarine "Algeciras" was attributable to the commander's negligence, and that he would, in consequence, be reprimanded.

At the end of next week the Cabinet will be occupied by the examination of the income tax proposals.

The Cabinet also discussed the question whether the hiring of churches which are the property of the community, from the Mayors in the form suggested by the Bishops' proposal agreements, can be permitted. No decision can be arrived at by the Cabinet in the matter before Tuesday next because no meeting of the Cabinet will be held on Saturday of this week, and the necessary instructions cannot be given to the Prefects until then.

NEWS FROM RUSSIA.

THE REVOLUTIONARY MOVEMENT.

Odessa, January 31.

This afternoon 20 armed men made their way into a printing establishment, took possession of the type and printed several thousand copies of an appeal to the sailors. They then placed the printed matter in a cab and drove off.

Warsaw, January 31.

The owner of a paper factory M. Epstein was shot dead today in his office.

A BANKRUPT CIRCUS.

Vienna, January 31.

The well known circus Wulff, which has for some time been giving performances in the circus Renz here has gone bankrupt. Owing to the want of money many of the animals, among them two elephants, have not been fed and are roaring for food. The Society for the Protection of Animals has undertaken to feed them for a time.

CHINESE RIVER PIRATES.

Hongkong, January 31.

In the districts adjoining the West river there are numbers of river pirates. In the course of December they took away 15 Junks. The Chinese merchants complain of the inadequate protection of the waterways, and the insecurity prevailing there which makes it necessary for them to take armed guards with them. A detachment of custom guards has gone to Nanning.

NOTES FROM ALL QUARTERS.

The gambling casinos at the French Riviera and other resorts are likely to experience the length of days which often attaches to threatened lives. Even M. Clémenceau, austere Republican though he be, dare not face such a storm as this killing of the geese that lay the golden eggs would raise about his ears. The disappearance of the casinos on the Riviera, at Vichy, Biarritz, and other places would strike a heavy, and even a fatal blow at many interests. To say nothing of the £12,000 a year that Vichy clubs alone pay to the municipality and local institutions, there are local loans of about £1,200,000, of which the interest would be gravely jeopardised by the disappearance of the clientèle of the clubs, to say nothing of large building enterprises now in progress which involve several hundreds of thousands. Nice has about £4,000,000 of debt, which would be imperilled. It is more than hinted that the operation of the suppression circular will be suspended so far as the cosmopolitan resorts are concerned, and that arrangements will be made for permanently tempering the wind to the shorn lamb.

There must be quite a number of women who make large sums in Paris out of the telling of fortunes. The usual price for servants is a couple of francs, and as much more as the silly girls are willing to part with. Their mistresses pay at least five francs, and twenty francs is no uncommon fee for those who can afford it. One of the best known "cartomanciennes" in Paris is Mme. Aurélie, the "fortune-telling countess," as she is called. To one who went to consult her the other day on the grave crisis in France provoked by the trouble between the Vatican and the French Government, Mme. Aurélie delivered this comforting message:—"Do not be alarmed. The courage of M. Clémenceau will triumph over all the obstacles in his path, and the internal peace of France will not be disturbed, thanks to the tact of the Prefect of Police. M. Lépine will know how to be sympathetic to everyone, his enemies as well as his friends. Peace will eventually be assured by the skill of the diplomats at the Quai d'Orsay." Asked if it was true that she had read the hands of several distinguished people, Mme. Aurélie admitted that that was so. "At Vichy last year," she said, "I made the Shah of Persia's horoscope. Eleonora Duse is a faithful client of mine, and always comes to see me when she is in Paris. When the King and Queen of Italy were here, a 'grand seigneur' of the Royal house came to consult me as to the descendants of his sovereigns. I announced a male heir to the throne of Italy, and as you know, my prediction was realised. Valentine Merelli, whose doings made so much stir in the papers not so very long ago, wrote to me when she was in prison and sent me a lock of her hair. She asked me to make her horoscope and tell her what the outcome of the trial would be. I told her she would be released, and again my prediction was realised. M. Syveton, the unfortunate deputy, came to see me eight days before his death, and in his hand I read the terrible tragedy which was to bring his life to a close."

A party of German aeronauts—two gentlemen and a lady—have just had the trying experience of a long and stormy voyage in mid-air, culminating in a narrow escape from death. Ascending from Berlin shortly before noon in fair weather, they soon found themselves in a gale of wind, which swept them along at an altitude of 6,000 feet, until by the middle of the afternoon Silesia was reached, and the lake of Ober-Poppo coming into view, hurried preparations for descent were made. Fortunately, the drag-rope and car caught in the trees fringing the lake, while the balloon tore away and forged ahead until the middle of the lake was reached. Then it plunged into the water. The passengers were assisted from the tree by labourers, who carried the lady down.

GENERAL NEWS.

With a return to cold weather in England, a report comes that London may be visited by a coal famine. Prices of coal have been advancing throughout the winter months and this has been caused through the difficulty in procuring coal by rail.

Unless the present difficulty in delivering is overcome, it is anticipated that the price of coal will yet increase immensely. Fuel continues to take a fortnight to reach Sheffield from Chesterfield.

The funeral of Mr. William Whiteley on Wednesday was attended by the most extraordinary scenes ever witnessed before at a funeral in the district. Mrs. Whiteley (the widow) and her two sons rode in the first carriage. The deceased's daughters brothers and other relatives were in the other carriages.

Then followed a remarkable procession of nearly six thousand employes of the firm. Nearly all the women were clad in deep mourning and formed a sombre-clad army of about half a mile in length.

A large number of beautiful wreaths covered the coffin, the widow's being a large harp with a broken string. Mr. William Whiteley's was a cushion and crown and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Whiteley's a large wreath.

Count Csaky, Attaché to the Austro-Hungarian Embassy in Dresden, has been transferred to the Embassy in St. Petersburg.

The programme of the concert to be given by M. Jacques Thibaut (violin) in conjunction with Herr David Blitz of Rotterdam (pianoforte) at the Palmengarten this evening, will be as follows: Sonata in A by César Franck; Concerto in E-flat by Mozart; both those works by special request. Pianoforte solos: Bach's Fantasia in C-minor; Caprice by Scarlatti arranged by Tausig; Schubert's Impromptu in B-flat. Violin solo: Bach's Chaconne. Pianoforte solos: Chopin's Berceuse in D-flat, and Ballade in E-minor; Liszt's Campanella. Violin solos: Ballade and Polonaise by Vieuxtemps.

The great success achieved by the St. Petersburg Quartet at their first concert was duplicated in the Palmengarten on Thursday evening, when their final concert for this season was given and an exceptionally interesting programme was presented. It consisted of Quartets by Tanéjew (B-flat-minor), Schubert (D-minor, a posthumous work) and Beethoven (E-flat, op. 74). The Tanéjew Quartet is most fascinating, its themes are melodious and it contains some very fine and skilful contrapuntal writing. It was performed with splendid finish in detail and colouring. In the Andantino the imitations were beautifully brought out by each instrument, and the Vivace e giocoso was played with such animation and humour that the applause was most spontaneous and prolonged. The lovely Andante con moto of the Schubert Quartet, from which the theme of the well known song "Der Tod und das Mädchen" is taken, was played most expressively. The Adagio from the Beethoven Quartet was beautifully sung and played with great intensity of expression.

Herr Kamensky has an exquisite tone and is an excellent leader. We admired the fine ensemble, the balance and exceptional finish attained by the Quartet, and hope they will give two more such concerts in Dresden next season.—H. M. F.

The programme for this evening's Symphony Concert at the Gewerbehause, in which the violinist Herr Fritz Hirt, of Prague, will assist, is as follows:

- (1) Overture, "Euryanthe" Weber.
- (2) Prelude and Fugue in G-minor, for violin alone (Herr Fritz Hirt) Bach.
- (3) Ballet Music from "Rosamunde" Schubert.
- (4) Pastoral Symphony (No. 6) Beethoven.
- (5) Concerto in D, for violin with orchestra (Herr F. Hirt) Tschaiowsky.
- (6) Symphonic Poem "Romeo and Julia" Svendsen.

The interesting works of Mrs. G. A. Barton, of Birmingham, who is without doubt the most gifted of all the lady photographic artists of England, will remain for only a few days longer on view at the art-photography salon of Oskar Böhr, of the firm Otto L. Göring, near the Café König. Mrs. Barton's pictures are chiefly fancy portraits, but so true to nature and so artistically executed that nothing in them betrays the art of the arrangement. The artistic effect is quite out of the common and such as none of Mrs. Barton's photographic colleagues have been able to produce. The picturesque grouping of most of the exhibits is in the highest degree original, and in an artistic sense must be pronounced perfect. The exhibition has aroused lively interest among Dresden artists, and several of the pictures have already been sold.

The guards in the city today are furnished by the 1st Grenadier Regiment No. 100. The band plays about 12.40 p.m. in the Schloss Platz.

SKI-ING COMPETITION.

The Ski-ing Competition arranged by the Dresden Akad. Sport Club takes place at Geising-Altenberg tomorrow. Three events will be decided. Visitors desirous of seeing the competition should leave Dresden by the 8 a.m. train for Geising, though they will be in time for the jumping if they leave at 9.20.

SUBMARINE SIGNALLING.

Some interesting extracts from the reports of the naval officers who were engaged last October under the orders of the British Admiralty in making experiments with the apparatus of the American Submarine Signalling Company have been printed for public information. The following are the conclusions arrived at by the experimenting officers: "If the light-vessels round the coast were fitted with submarine bells, it would be possible for ships to navigate in fog with almost as great certainty as in clear weather. The saving of time and money, brought about by enabling ships to reach port instead of being delayed by fog and so losing tides, would be very considerable; while shipwreck and loss of life would be rendered less frequent. Ships not fitted with the apparatus would hear the submarine bell much farther and with greater certainty than they would hear the present aerial fog signals used by light-vessels, although they would be unable to get directions from them. Men-of-war would be as much benefited as merchant vessels, as it is of the first importance that they should be able to navigate the coast with speed and certainty in thick weather. The bell could also be used to enable men-of-war, when collecting at a rendezvous in thick weather, to determine the direction of the flag-ship at a distance of about ten miles, if selected ships in the fleets were fitted with bells". The experiments were carried out by two cruisers, one of which, fitted with a submarine bell, remained at anchor; while the other, fitted with microphones, one on each side of the ship, steamed out to sea, and tested the carrying power of the bell's sound at various distances and compass bearings. At a distance of five miles, which is beyond the certain range of any of the sound signals in use by light-vessels during fog, the submarine bell could be heard and its position located with certainty. It was also noticed that an officer stationed below could, by placing his ear against the ship's side below the water-line, hear the bell at that distance without apparatus of any kind. The bell, it should be mentioned, was fitted with a code-ringer, and the code-signal used was five strokes in succession at two seconds interval, then a silent interval of five seconds, then the five strokes again followed by silence as before, and so on. At five miles distance that signal was continuously audible even when the ship was moving at high speed, up to 14 knots. When the speed was reduced to five knots and the ship's head was kept turning in a circle, it was found that the sound was loudest when the bell was in a line at right angles to the ship's keel, and that it was lost, or faintest, when right ahead or astern. The diminution of the sound from loudest to faintest was evenly gradual, and each of the two microphones served its own side of the ship only, ceasing to transmit the signal when the ship's bow or stern pointed straight at the bell. The experiments were carried out at greater distances, up to 16 miles; the five distinct strokes of the bell being then still audible, and much more clearly when the ship's engines were stopped.

Among the closing remarks of the report are these: "The results obtained in the experiments show the extreme utility of the submarine bell.... The fog signals at present used in light-ships in Great Britain cannot be depended upon to be heard in all conditions, even at one or two miles distance.... The submarine bell increased the range at which a fog signal may be heard nearly to the distance at which a light-vessel's light can be seen in clear weather.... To double or treble the range of a fog signal is a great advantage to shipping, and the facility of determining the direction of a sound signal is in itself a very valuable discovery".

of versatile genius, who was compelled to flee from Cassel when it was discovered that he was stealing the medals which, as professor of archaeology and keeper of the gems, he had in his keeping. He fled to England, where he had already been elected an honorary fellow of the Royal Society, from whose roll his name was afterwards expunged. For six years he was assay master and storekeeper at Dolcoath mine. Afterwards he classified a famous collection at Edinburgh, so affording Scott an opportunity to model his "Douster-swivel" upon him. Raspe went to Muckross, but died there of fever before he could take the position which he had gone to fill. The original Baron Munchausen was a member of an ancient Hanoverian family, who had seen not a little service in the army against the Turks. He loved to recount extraordinary adventures to those who would listen. Raspe, who fancied himself neglected and slighted by the Baron, turned this well-known idiosyncrasy of the romancist to account in his classic. When the fame of the book had become almost universal, Scott was much surprised to meet at a London musical party a man who was introduced as Baron Munchausen. The Baron good-humouredly explained that he was the nephew of the immortal Baron, and told his new friend how the Baron had delighted to retail or invent the exploits which the pen of the ready Raspe had set down. His uncle, he said, was ordinarily a veracious, sensible man, and his adventures were only told by way of quizzing credulous people. The Baron Munchausen of Scott's acquaintance was a grave and serious person, a good deal embarrassed by a title which required eternal explanations.
