THE CAMPAIGN AGAINST THE HOUSE OF LORDS.

London, February 8.

The Attorney General, Sir J. Lawson Walton, in a speech delivered at Leeds discussed the question of the House of Lords. He stated that the Liberal party had begun a serious and important work which implied a complete alteration of the Constitution and would possibly necessitate two or three dissolutions. The House of Lords was no longer in harmony with modern democratic institutions and must disappear. It was impossible to say beforehand if any measure would be passed by the Peers, and if so in what form. The Government would endeavour to carry out the wishes of the people by passing Bills which the Peers would at once throw out. This would lead to an alliance between the Crown and the people for the overthrow of the aristocracy.

London, February 9.

The Attorney General Sir Lawson Walton, in a conversation with reference to his speech at Leeds on Thursday evening, said that it would be quite constitutional for the Government to appeal to the Throne to put a bridle on the Upper House. After consultation with the Throne the Government must appeal to the people. But the prospect that the Throne would assent to an increase of the number of peers or to the limitation of the competence of the House of Lords might perhaps suffice to bring about the reform desired. Sir Lawson Walton had declared at Leeds, in speaking of the Upper House, that the Government would not be deterred by threats and would bring in the Bills which the people expect of them. The rejection of those Bills by the House of Lords would be at its own risk.

MR. LLOYD GEORGE AND HOME RULE.

Belfast, February 8.

The President of the Board of Trade, Mr. Lloyd George, made a speech at a public meeting of Liberals last evening, and said that he was a convinced supporter of Home Rule. But while he supported Irish Self-Government in all matters which concerned her alone, the supremacy of the Imperial Parliament must be maintained. His hearers might depend upon the Government not to introduce any measure which would in the smallest degree tamper with the supremacy of the Imperial Parliament. He described as ridiculous the idea that anyone could think of or demand separation which would be injurious to the interests of Ireland, the Irish and humanity.

The meeting passed off without disturbance although troops had been held in readiness in case of such disturbance, Belfast being the centre of Irish Unionism.

Mr. Lloyd George is the first Liberal Minister to speak in Belfast for 30 years.

THE U. S. A. AND CUBA.

New York, February 8.

Both at Havana and at Washington the statement that America intends to withdraw from Cuba has been reiterated. The restoration of Cuban independence is awaited expectantly by the Liberals, who are sure of a victory at the elections, should they take place within the next few months. The Conservatives would prefer a longer delay, and many would even welcome an American protectorate rather than see the political power in the hands of their opponents. It was stated yesterday that the Conservatives, anticipating an early withdrawal of the American troops, and the handing over of the Government to the Liberals, had already begun to make arrangements for the next revolution. There is, however, nothing to confirm these statements. The Conservatives deeply resent the favouritism which they declare Governor Lagoon shows to the Liberals.

ANGLO-GERMAN RELATIONS.

London, February 8.

The Graphic publishes an interview which an English journalist, Mr. Bashford, has had with the Secretary of State of the German Admiralty, at which the latter is stated to have said: "I cannot imagine that the English people seriously believe that the German naval authorities are planning war against England. I can only repeat that I regard such a charge as too foolish to be worth contradicting. There is no single question in the whole world, which could justify offensive action on our part against England."

NEWS FROM FRANCE.

FRENCH FINANCE.

Paris, February 8.

In the Chamber of Deputies the discussion of the interpellations on the financial proposals was continued.

M. Willm (Socialist) was of opinion that Russia offered no kind of security to her creditors.

The Minister for Foreign Affairs wished to protest against this statement, but was restrained by those near him.

When M. Willm went on to speak of the deeds of blood in Russia, general disturbance prevailed in the Chamber.

M. Pichon protested against the Chamber interfering in the domestic policy of another country. (Loud applause.) A further remark of M. Pichon's that he was doing his duty as all Members of the House should do theirs, caused loud applause to break out anew from all parts of the House, save from the Socialist benches.

M. Willm then concluded his remarks and said that the new Russian loan constituted a real danger for the French savers.

M. Jaurès (Socialist) said that there was no need to be disquieted by the fall in French rentes. The only cause of disquietude was the manoeuvres which had for their object a further fall in the rentes, in order to combat the work of Parliament. (Applause from many benches; M. Caillaux, Finance Minister, called out encouragingly to the speaker.) M. Jaurès, continuing, said that he, for his part, did not systematically oppose the investment of French capital in foreign countries. He endorsed M. Pichon's protest against official interposition in the domestic affairs of a foreign country; he considered, however, that all parties had a perfect right to express themselves freely on the internal condition of a country in which France had great interests. He would not say that Russia was passing through a crisis dangerous to her existence, but Russia would go to the wall if she had not a Government controlled by the people. "The responsibility," said M. Jaurès, "will rest on the autocracy and on you."

M. Pichon said: "You are very eloquent, but you do not believe anything you say."

In continuing his speech M. Jaurès devoted himself especially to attacking the credit and financial institutions which interfered in the domestic affairs of Russia. He spoke of Russian Industries, which might be developed into the greatest in the world, and of the uncontrolled action of the Russian Government and the State Bank. He reproached the Russian Government with procuring money by all kinds of devices and attacked the Russo-French Bank which was founded, presumably, to build Russian railways with French capital, but actually, to hand money to the Russian Government which dominated the Bank. M. Jaurès then mentioned a Bank which was founded on November 10, 1906 for the construction of railways after negotiations between the Moscow financier Biskra and a French financier. This company after the issue of bonds would become a foreign company and its bonds would stand at the disposal of the Russian Government. (Interruption.) M. Jaurès continued that he had no wish to show up any Member of the Chamber (the Member referred to was M. Rouvier) but he regretted that the Member in question was in secret preparing a loan for Russian reaction and thereby making his political influence carry weight. In conclusion M. Jaurès said that he wished that a free Russia might be the loyal, devoted friend of France. (Applause.) They might warn the French financiers in order to avert a catastrophe. (Applause from the extreme Left.)

M. Caillaux regretted that sometimes there was a lack of the necessary reticence with regard to a great nation which always fulfilled its obligations and had often afforded valuable assistance to France. (Loud applause.) The certain X mentioned the day before by M. Rouannet had been unjustly accused of having accepted a large commission for the latest loan. The Chamber shared in the responsibility for the employment of French capital abroad. For the rest France had only 40 milliards of foreign securities of which one half was Government stock. M. Caillaux then referred to the companies mentioned by M. Jaurès, and said that the Government viewed with favour such companies as had for their object the making of French capital available for such industrial works as furthered home industries. The Government exercised all controlling rights; he (M. Caillaux) would never enter the lists for financial nationalism, but was far more of the opinion that the investment of French capital abroad gave France a superior position in the realm of diplomacy. (Applause.)

M. Aynard considered that the interpellation of M. Jaurès was serious inasmuch as it endangered their foreign relations and French credit. He pointed out the reason why French capital must seek to obtain more lucrative rates of interest abroad than it could obtain in France, and said that on the day on which complete peace was restored in France would the best use of French capital at home be made.

The amended order of the Day, approved of by the Government, was then adopted.

ACCIDENT TO A TORPEDO BOAT.

Lorient, February 8.

This morning an explosion took place on torpedo boat 339. Nine men were killed and one injured.

Paris, February 8.

The Ministry of Marine has received a telegram from the Marine Prefect in Lorient confirming the report of an accident to torpedo boat 339. The explosion was due to a flaw in the boiler and took place during manoeuvres, when the boat was running at high speed. Nine men including a technical inspector, a boatsman and seven sailors were fatally injured. Another sailor who was slightly injured by burns will receive a special reward in virtue of his courageous bearing at the time of the accident.

Lorient, February 8.

Further details are to hand as to the accident. The manoeuvres were almost at an end when the boiler exploded. Of the 11 men in the stokehold nine were terribly burnt and died on the spot, while a tenth was severely injured. The eleventh, a stoker, escaped unhurt. It has been ascertained that the explosion was due to the fracture of a tube especially introduced to prevent such accidents, but which seems to have failed to act. The torpedo boat was brought back here at 4 p. m. The crew on board of her relate many incidents of the catastrophe and confirm the reports already published. The boatsman Le Vay was the first to penetrate the stoke hold and he was followed by Brochard. Both gave proofs of great determination and Le Vay probably prevented a still greater catastrophe by shutting the cocks and opening the ventilators.

TRAINS SNOWBOUND IN SPAIN.

Handaye, February 8.

The snowstorms which have prevailed in North and Central Spain since yesterday have resulted in the cessation of railway traffic. Trains which left Madrid last evening are snowbound. The express train for Irun is held up at Villalba, the Northern express at Torrenobeno and the Southern express at Segovia. Many goods trains are snowed up on exposed sections. The Southern express from Handaye to Paris had to leave without picking up the Spanish mails.

NEWS FROM RUSSIA.

THE MURDER OF M. ALEXANDROVSKI.

Pensa, February 8.
Further details have transpired as to the murder of Governor Alexandrovski. As the Governor was leaving the theatre last evening at the close of the performance, a young man pushed his way through the crowd and fired a revolver at him, the bullet striking the Governor in the head and killing him on the spot. After the murderer had also shot down the assistant of the Chief of Police before he could fire his revolver, he fled into the theatre where the manager attempted to seize him. The latter fired on the manager but failed to hit him, the bullet striking a policeman who fell to the ground dead; another theatre official who attempted to secure the murderer was severely wounded by a bullet. Taking advantage of the excitement that prevailed the murderer fled to the ladies' cloak room and induced an unsuspecting female attendant to show him the stairs leading to the basement. On these stairs the murderer, who attempted to commit suicide, was later on discovered in an unconscious condition. He died in hospital without his identity having been established. The bullets used by him turned out to have been poisoned with cyanide of potassium.

CHUN-CHUSES BUYING ARMS.

St. Petersburg, February 8.
The Kharbin correspondent of the Dalny Vestnik reports that a depot of arms and guns for the Chun-chuses has been opened at Han-shin, which lies 5½ miles westwards of Kharbin. The Chun-chuses have over 500 army rifles stored there, and they are guarded by twelve men. The owner of the storehouse has begged the authorities to release him from the contract made with the robber bands. Most of these rifles are the Russian three-line rifle and the Verdun rifle, and there is a great store of cartridges ready for use. The sale of these and of other weapons to the Chun-chuses is being carried on by Caucasians; and when a sale is effected the rifles and ammunition arrive at Kharbin hidden in loads of hay or corn. Owing to being able to buy these smuggled rifles and ammunition in this way, the Chun-chuses are increasing in number, and their manner is becoming more overbearing every day. It is feared there will be a great deal of trouble with them.

THE SITUATION IN MOROCCO.

Tangier, February 8.
The Caid Zellal who arrived here today, has been pardoned by the War Minister, El Gebbas; he will leave Tangier again tomorrow.

Cologne, February 8.
The Kölnische Zeitung learns from Berlin that the correspondent of the Temps in Tangier has been finding fault, in that landed property in the vicinity of Tangier has been bought by Germans. The statement, as such, is true, but it is merely a question of purchase by private individuals just as such purchases have been frequently made by French capitalists in the environs of Tangier, far outnumbering those of the German firm. For the rest not only German and French possess land round Tangier, but Englishmen, Italians and men of other nationalities.

THE CHINESE NAVY.

London, February 8.
The Tribune announces from Shanghai that China intends to organise four squadrons and to establish the necessary naval stations. The war office authorities have decided to establish a naval academy at once in Tientsin, and 4 naval schools, at which officers for the new Chinese navy will be trained by English and Japanese naval instructors.

IN HONOUR OF THE FALLEN DEAD.

Kharbin, February 8.
The Japanese are erecting two memorials on the Perkelochny hill at Port Arthur in memory of the Japanese and Russian soldiers who fell during the siege. In the vicinity of the memorial for the Russian soldiers a Russian chapel will be built on which will be the inscription: "To the heroes who found their death in the defence of Port Arthur".

GENERAL NEWS.

(From our London correspondent.)

King Edward and Queen Alexandra were expected to reach Dover at about four o'clock yesterday afternoon on their return from Paris. They have enjoyed their stay in the French Capital immensely and may decide on making it an annual visit.

It was very unfortunate for Sir Francis Bertie that he was attacked with influenza and compelled to take to his bed on Wednesday last, as he had arranged many little matters for the comfort of their Majesties.

Quite a memorable banquet was given at the Savoy Hotel on Wednesday night by the English Society of Pilgrims to the newly appointed Ambassador to the United States, Mr. James Bryce, when over two hundred Pilgrims dined at twenty round tables in the Louis Seize room.

Spring Tours to Greece, Constantinople, Sicily and Italy.

A small party, under the leadership of Miss I. B. Watson, Lecturer on Art, will leave Dresden March 21st. Arrangements for one or all of the tours. Prospectus furnished on application.—Address: I. B. Watson, Uhland Strasse 38, II. Dresden.

At the centre table was Mr. Bryce with Field-Marshal Earl Roberts on his right and Mr. Whitelaw Reid, the American Ambassador on his left, others at the table including Mr. Haldane, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Japanese Ambassador, Sir Frederick Pollock, Professor Dicey and Archdeacon Sinclair.

There were also Sir Antony MacDonnell and Sir A. Lyall to make up the party whilst close by sat Sir Mortimer Durand, the late Ambassador to the United States. Representatives of America may be mentioned in the celebrated after dinner orator Mr. Patrick Francis Murphy, and the well known millionaire draper Mr. H. Gordon Selfridge.

Mr. Whitelaw Reid in eloquent words proposed the toast of "Our Guest" and observed that the good will of the hour would not create any allusions as to Mr. Bryce's duties, as he knows perfectly well that he is sent first to look scrupulously after the interests of his own country which are best promoted in both countries by keeping the peace.

In the course of his speech Mr. Whitelaw Reid remarked that Mr. Bryce would find in Mr. Root very much such a man as Sir Edward Grey with the same elevated views. He also said that at the heads of the two Governments stand two statesmen with unrivalled records as peacemakers in His Majesty, Edward the Seventh, and Theodore Roosevelt and that each has the confidence of the world alike.

Mr. Bryce replying, as soon as the applause on his rising died away, commenced by saying that he had no words to return thanks sufficiently, and that of all the duties a man could undertake there was none more difficult or higher than that with which he had been entrusted. One of the things which encouraged him was that he had the honour of knowing President Roosevelt and some of his Ministers as well as many leaders of industry and commerce in America. England and America were proud of each other and both were imbued with spirit of peace.

In reply to the toast of the visitors given by Sir Mortimer Durand, the Japanese Ambassador replied, declaring that peace was the great aim of Japan.

The final oration came from that clever American orator, Mr. Patrick Murphy who fairly excelled himself with the brilliancy of his discourse.

News from Stockholm has reached London to the effect that on the occasion of the golden wedding of King Oscar and Queen Sophia on June 6, the King of Sweden intends to abdicate in favour of the Crown Prince, whose eldest son is married to the daughter of the Duke of Connaught.

The American Lawn Tennis Association has decided to challenge for the Davis trophy, and will send a team to England, with the understanding that proper attention is paid to the personnel of the team, and the requisite financial arrangements can be made.

In order to establish a uniform system of admitting persons to trade on the ships in his Majesty's dockyards, the Admiral-Superintendents and Captain-Superintendents have been directed by the Admiralty to arrange a scheme which is to be submitted for their approval.

A cablegram has been received by the Admiralty stating that his Majesty's ship "Dominion," homeward bound, passed the Azores, all well.

The flag of Rear-Admiral G. A. Giffard, the new superintendent of Chatham Dockyard, was hoisted last Wednesday.

The annual hockey match between London and the combined Universities was played at Malden on the fine ground of the Kingston Hill Club on Wednesday last. The 'Varsities played as advertised, but G. Logan and H. R. Jordan weakened London greatly by their absence. The 'Varsities held the advantage forward, and the winning goal was scored by Goodwin. The smart half-back play on both sides was remarkable, honour being due to L. M. Robinson of Cambridge, Gardner of Kingston Hill and W. Bedlam of Hounslow.

A morning performance of "Die Walküre" was given at Covent Garden Theatre on Wednesday last which proved a great success. The orchestra was perhaps the best of the season whilst Herr Schalk and Mme. Litvinne came in for great ovations as also did Herr van Dyck and Herr Bertram who was in far better voice than previously. Miss Marie Brema made a powerful Fricka.

Chief interest was naturally centred in Miss Agnes Nicholls who undertook the part of Sieglinde for the first time, and her acting was even better than she displayed as Elsa. Her singing of the part left nothing to be desired, and no better Sieglinde has ever been heard in England. A representative audience fully testified its appreciation of this magnificent performance.

The Hon. Charles Rothschild, the younger son of Lord Rothschild was married in Vienna on Wednesday to Fräulein Rozsika von Wertheimstein. Lord and Lady Rothschild were present as also the bridegroom's brother the Hon. Walter Rothschild, and his sister and her husband, Capt. Clive Behrens. Other branches of the family attended and the synagogue was charmingly decorated with flowers and tropical plants. The bride belongs to a very ancient and celebrated Jewish family and her father served in the Austrian army.

Tomorrow (Monday), the Premier will give his banquet to his supporters, as usual, at his official residence in Downing-street. Mr. Balfour entertains his followers at his house in Carlton-gardens, whilst Lord Lansdowne will have a banquet at Lansdowne House.

Mr. Tomkinson, member for Crewe, has been chosen by the Prime Minister to move the Address. He is a railway director and a fairly old Parliamentary hand.

The death of Sir Godfrey Lushington which took place very suddenly last week at the age of 75 removed another prominent man from our midst. He was formerly permanent Under-Secretary at the Home Office and ten years later retired from that position and for several years after was an L. C. C. Alderman. His interest in the Dreyfus case was great and many letters were written by him on the subject.

No doubt owing to the marvellous popularity of the German opera at Covent Garden, arrangements have been made for a season of English opera at Covent Garden next Christmas when it is intended to give a performance in English of the four operas in Wagner's "Ring of the Nibelungs". This was first heard in England in 1882 at Her Majesty's Theatre under the management of Angelo Neumann, with Anton Seidl for conductor. Four cycles were given in German and the season was a success.

Hitherto the only one of the four works given in English is "The Valkyrie" produced by the Carl Rosa Company in 1896 at the Prince's Theatre, Manchester. Dr. Richter will most likely conduct the first series, as the scheme in hand is greatly approved of by him.

Nearly all Wagner's operas have been played in English and the taste for that remarkable composer's music grows rather than diminishes in England, as is amply proved by the large audiences which nightly patronise the present German season, which has been so admirably managed.

The grand season at Covent Garden will commence in April, during which works will be sung in Italian, German and French, and in August the San Carlo Company come there for a longer stay than last year, so that opera will be going on at Covent Garden practically all the year round.

A lady who wrote to one of the London papers asking whether, under the new Act, she would be liable for compensation if her servant injured her thumb or fingers on an old nail or splinter while cleaning with a scrubbing-brush, has received the reply that she certainly would. Servants in England will be glad to know this.

A quantity of remarkably fine diamonds came recently to London from a new mine in the Orange River Colony; the stones have fairly astonished and pleased experts. The mine is called the Robert Victor Mine, and is at Boshoff, a few miles across the border from Kimberley. It is reported to work out at nearly three-quarters of a carat per load, a result hitherto unequalled.

Queen Alexandra has signified her intention of being present at a special performance of "Lohengrin" (tomorrow, Monday) by the German opera company at Covent Garden Theatre. Fräulein Aekté and Herr Herold, the Danish tenor, will appear.

Many equestrians are abandoning Rotten Row as they complain sadly of its present condition which they consider unsafe and only appropriate to its name. Something will have to be done, and quickly too, as this is one of the great features of Hyde Park.

An excellent performance of Scribe's "Bataille de Dames" was given by M. Georges Berr at the New Royalty Theatre on Wednesday night. He made a very fine de Grignon and was admirably supported by Mdlle. Marcilly who was splendid as the witty Comtesse d'Autreval.

The Bishop of London is to take the service at the wedding of Captain the Hon. Dudley Pelham, 10th Hussars and brother of the Earl of Yarborough, and Miss Evelyn Waldo Sibthorp, tomorrow at All Saints' Church, Canwick near Lincoln.

All three football ties which were replayed on Wednesday were definitely decided. Crystal Palace won by one goal to nothing from Fulham, and Sunderland gained a similar victory over Luton, whilst Notts County with five goals beat Burslem Port Vale who failed to score.

Treasure trove, supposed to be worth £5,000, has been found in a sandpit at Crayford, Kent. Nine massive armlets of solid gold were dug out in a perfect state of preservation dating from a period long before the Christian era. Their antiquity makes them out to be almost priceless and the Crown has claimed them.

DODGING THE CUSTOMS.

The Italian Press is making a loud outcry about an alleged great plot that is being organised in Greece for flooding Italy with enormous quantities of dried grapes. It is said that one million pounds are already prepared for embarkation. The grievance lies in this, that the grapes have been prepared in a way which would enable them to enter Italy at tenpence a quintal instead of about sixteen shillings, as it is estimated that from a million pounds of these prepared grapes about one and a-half million hectolitres of wine could be manufactured. Agents had prepared a market in half a dozen of the chief cities of Italy.

MEDICAL WITNESSES.

Mr. Jerome, who is conducting the prosecution in the Thaw case, has shown himself master of the "smashing" methods which members of the New York Bar employ with expert witnesses. In a minor case a doctor steps into the box, gives his evidence in terms similar to those complained of in the report of the Cancer Research Fund, puzzles counsel, impresses the jury by language utterly incomprehensible to them, and leaves the box triumphant. For a trial such as that in progress, however, the counsel by whom the expert has to be handled crams as for an examination, and comes to his task specially armed.

With the right man in the case, it needs but the slightest slip by the witness and he is delivered into the hands of the enemy. A good example is given in Mr. Francis L. Wellman's volume on the subject. Ten thousand pounds were claimed by a lady who had sustained injuries by falling over some obstruction in a street in New York. She was carried into court, sustained by females with solicitude demonstrative enough to have done credit even to Mrs. Bardell's friends. The great witness upon whom she placed reliance was a very experienced doctor, who spent half his life in the witness-box giving expert testimony in cases of this sort. He had attended the plaintiff, and made over two hundred examinations of her. He now described for three-quarters of an hour her sufferings and the horrible fate to which, he said, she was inevitably doomed. The defence was that the complaint from which the woman suffered was a form of hysteria. But how to shake the doctor's evidence? Counsel began by showing that the witness had for very many years acted as witness for various railways, and been kept so busy that he could not have had much leisure for study of recent cases. What medical authority agreed with him? Dr. Erskine agreed with him in "Erskine on the Spine." How had he found time to study that work? "Well," said the witness, "to tell the truth, I have often heard of you, and I half suspected that you would ask me some such foolish question; so this morning after breakfast I took down my copy of Erskine's book, and found that he agreed entirely with my diagnosis." Counsel popped his hand under the table, and instantly produced the very book. "Show me the passage," he said. "Oh, I can't do it now," answered the doctor; "it is a very thick book." Counsel reminded him that he had only just previously looked at it, and that he should have no difficulty in finding the reference; there was plenty of time available. Counsel sat down to give the witness time. The doctor dared not open the book. He left the box overwhelmed. The jury knew that he had lied, and the plaintiff lost her case.

In a similar case damages were claimed for a fractured ankle by a doctor's housekeeper. Her employer was a man well known in society circles; was famous as a practitioner, and popular as a club man. He himself had set the broken limb, and was her chief witness. Counsel got out the fact that his practice was not that of a specialist. Little by little it was admitted that he had not had a case of this sort for a year, for two years, for five—indeed, never since his student days in hospital; whereas like cases were treated every day in the surgical wards, and complete cures effected. Then came tests. A bone was handed up. The doctor described it as that of a woman's leg. "What?" said counsel. It was a woman's leg, but the doctor blushed, apologised, and said that he had meant to say a man's leg. He was puzzled as to whether it was the right or the left, and so utterly confused when counsel handed up the bones of a foot that he tried to fit the knee into the ankle. That woman got £40, and the cross-examination had saved a hundred times that sum.

Only the born cross-examiner knows when to stop; another man blunders on to ruin. In a sensational case a doctor was accused of having poisoned his wife by administering morphine and atropine in such quantities as effectually to obliterate evidences of death from either. The doctor in the case had certified off-hand that death was due to natural causes, and very fairly he told the story of his investigations. Counsel for the defence could not let well alone. He had primed for the case, and wished to show his learning. He dragged the friendly witness through mazes of questions quite irrelevant, and having for the hundredth time, got the assurance that he had thought death natural, asked if he had any reason to alter his view. The witness begged to be allowed to ask a question. "Has the report of the chemist telling of his discovery of atropine and morphine in the stomach been offered in evidence? And has the report of the pathologist been put in? No? Then I can truthfully say that as yet, in the absence of those two, I know of no legal evidence which would cause me to alter the opinion expressed in my certificate." The reservations were fatal, and hanged the prisoner.

The Prince of Sinodal has been delayed in coming to Tamara and while passing the night in camp near a chapel erected by his ancestors, he is surprised by his enemies at Satan's instigation and killed. Tamara, awaiting her lover, is horrified when his corpse is brought in and as Satan again renews his mysterious wooing, she obtains permission from her reluctant father to retire into a nunnery. Satan, who really loves her, in spite of the angel, enters the nunnery; Tamara relents but when Satan kisses her, the angel appears and Tamara sinks lifeless to the ground. LOCAL.

Some really excellent music was heard on Friday evening at the Vereinshaus in the second of the Royal Conservatorium concerts of this term. The programme contained eight numbers: one for orchestra alone, and seven with orchestral accompaniment. Three were for pianoforte, two vocal, and two for solo instruments. The composers who, it may be said with truth, were honoured in the wise selection and careful treatment of their works were Chopin, Wagner, Verdi, Saint Saëns, and Sivert. Of the first named an Andante spianato and Polonaise for pianoforte with orchestra headed the programme. A pupil of Herr Schulz-Beuthen was at the pianoforte, and both the movements were admirably rendered. In Saint Saëns' III. Concerto op. 29, a pupil of Herr Reuss played the pianoforte part of the Moderato assai and Allegro maestoso with thoroughly artistic feeling and workmanship; and an at least equally high degree of excellence was shown by a pupil of Herr Kronke's in the same composer's "Rhapsodie d'Auvergne."

The Rigoletto Fantasia for clarinet, arranged by Bassi (a former Director of the Dresden Opera), and the C-minor Concerto for violoncello, op. 38 of Jules de Sivert, were played by pupils of Herren Gabler and Wille respectively with highly finished technique. "Wolfram's first song", from Tannhäuser, was well sung by a pupil of Herr Mann; and an Aria from Verdi's "La forza del destino" by a very promising representative of the Orgeni class.

The orchestra, which was composed entirely of pupils of the Conservatorium, under Herr Striegler or conductor-pupils of his, acquitted itself of its varied tasks with high credit.—G.

On Tuesday, the 12th, Miss Watson will lecture in the gallery on the followers of Rembrandt and the Dutch Genre Painters, of whom the gallery possesses a remarkably fine collection of pictures. The class will meet promptly at 11.30 in the Rembrandt room.

The guards in the city today are furnished by the 12th Infantry regiment No. 177, whose band will play in the Neustadt about 12.30 p.m. Tomorrow the guards will be furnished by the 1st Grenadier regiment No. 100, and the band will play in the Schloss Platz about 12.40.

DEADLY PLAY.

A curious instance of how Draconian punishments defeat themselves by sheer excess of severity is furnished by a recent case of court-martial in France. One night during December, after the call to quarters, when the men had been dismissed to the dormitories, one of the soldiers pushed a corporal on to a bed. It was a mere piece of horseplay, and no blow was struck or harm intended. However, to play with the stripes is to assault a superior, and on this deadly charge the poor young simpleton was haled before a court-martial, which duly sentenced him to death. Happily, a more humane feeling is abroad in the French War Department under Picquart, and the sentence has been commuted to two months' imprisonment.

THE CENTENARY OF EYLAU.

We are still within the cycle of the centenaries of Bonaparte's meteoric career. A year or two ago it was Austerlitz, when it was found that after all the ink and rhetoric poured over the victory which, as Pitt said, destroyed the map of Europe, there was not enough enthusiasm left in France and Austria combined to subscribe about £2,000 for a monument on the field. Last week saw the centenary of Eylau, when the French armies, after a day of doubtful fighting, had the joy of seeing the Russians retreat, when they themselves had not the ammunition left to sustain another battle, had the enemy again attacked—or even held his ground. The corpse-strewn plain of Eylau, besides yielding Poland into his hands, furnished the hollow Emperor with a pretext for one of those sonorous commonplaces that sounded so well and meant so little. "This spectacle," he said, "is one that inspires princes with love of peace and horror of war." This from the man who afterwards wantonly led an armed nation to destruction on the Russian steppes!

OVER THE GARDEN WALL.

The appearance in England of a famous jumping horse owned by an American millionaire will set men seeking records of the feats accomplished by English and Irish horses. Many stories are told of jumps of between eight and nine feet done by British hunters, but these, though highly meritorious if authentic, do not count as records. They have come in the course of the day's hunting, and nobody has taken the trouble to return afterwards to the spot and take the exact measurement of the obstacles cleared. Men who hunt in Ireland might know something worth hearing of feats of this sort. The most surprising jump made in Ireland was one achieved by the late Empress of Austria. After a desperate chase a fox leapt the wall of Maynooth College, where the students were meditatively pacing to and fro, deep in contemplation. As the fox scurried across the ground the young clericals, it is said, were about to take up the chase themselves, when a beautiful woman, superbly mounted, cleared the wall in pursuit of the quarry. It was the Empress. Dr. Walsh, the present Roman Catholic Archbishop of Dublin, received his unexpected guest with gracious courtesy. The chase had taken her through deep water, and her wet, clinging garments suggested the desirability of a change. But there was not a shred of female attire at Maynooth College. They got out of the difficulty by the Empress throwing over her shoulders an academical gown belonging to Dr. Walsh, and in this she rode home after a pleasant chat with the president and professors. In exchange for her welcome wrap the Empress pressed upon the future Archbishop a beautiful diamond ring. Nor did that end her expression of gratitude. Upon her return to Austria she sent to the college a superb statuette, in solid silver, of St. George and the Dragon, and for Dr. Walsh vestments of silk and gold worked with shamrocks in green silk.

BURGLARIOUS "CLOCHES DE CORNEVILLE."

Nocturnal clock striking and too much of it has enabled the Paris police to lay their hands upon a gang of burglars and their very valuable booty. The inhabitants of a house in the Faubourg du Temple quarter, complaining to the police that for some time past they had heard an extraordinary amount of what sounded like electric bell ringing in the night time, that seemed to come from rooms in a certain direction, the police first verified the fact for themselves, and then raided the rooms. Here they found two men busily engaged in testing the condition of a number of timepieces, of which they had stolen 200 from a manufacturer's ware-house, and were selling at vile prices, as tested.

POINTS IN AEROGRAPHY.

The German Atlantic liner "Kaiser Wilhelm II." has within the past week or two established one or two interesting facts in connection with wireless telegraphy. The ship had been equipped with a Marconi apparatus having a range of action up to 200 sea miles, but, in point of fact, communication had been found possible with places 1,200 sea miles distant. Besides this, as the messages sent 1,200 miles crossed a large part of the Continent and over the Alps, the theory of mountains being an obstacle to wireless telegraphy has been disproved. It has also been established that at Newfoundland and the Hook the state of the atmosphere favours wireless telegraphy.

ARMoured MOTOR CARS.

After the practical demonstration given during the Boer War of the utility of armoured trains, the day of the armoured motor car was sure to come. Some interesting tests have recently been conducted by the French War Department to test the practical adaptability for the rough needs of campaigning of a new type of such a car. It carries in the rear a revolving cupola occupied by two men, one to manipulate the cupola and the other the gun. The chauffeur has also an armoured screen behind which he can render himself and his driving gear invisible. The machine weighs a little over two tons, is of 35 horse-power, and makes 27 miles an hour. It was found quite capable of ascending to all parts of Port Valerien, of using the roughest country roads, and of clearing the widest and deepest ditches.
