THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THE SWETTENHAM INCIDENT. ARMY REFORM.

London, March 4.

The Under Secretary for the Colonies informed the House that Sir Alexander Swettenham, Governor of Jamaica, sought permission on January 23rd to retire from his Governorship on account of his advancing age. He was offered the chance of remaining in office, but in a telegram just received by the Government he stated that he had made up his mind to leave Jamaica.

Mr. Haldane brought in a Bill for the carrying out of his scheme as explained on February 25th for forming a territorial army, to comprise the hitherto existing militia, yeomanry and volunteers. The Bill contemplates County associations to which will be entrusted the management of the formation and administration of the territorial troops in the several Counties. The associations will act under the directions of the Army Council, which will be responsible for the control and training of the troops. The Bill contains several clauses relating to the enlistment, training and mobilisation, and gives powers for the formation of the so-called "special contingent".

The Minister said that the organisation of a really strong second line of defence was the best protection against a movement aiming at the introduction of a system of conscription. The Government would abide by the main features of the plan, but were ready to accept amendment of details.

NEWS FROM AMERICA.

THE HOMESTEAD EXPLOSION.

New York, March 4.

By the explosion during the construction of a tunnel at Homestead twenty persons were killed and twenty-five more were buried beneath debris and must be regarded as lost. The number of wounded has not yet been ascertained. All the windows of houses were smashed as far as the west bank of the Hudson river. The explosion was felt over a circumference of 30 kilometres, even on board the ships.

TARIFF REFORM.

Mr. Randal, Member of the House of Representatives, shortly before the prorogation of Congress, made a speech opposing the tariff policy at present obtaining, and read a letter from Mr. Secretary Root in which he said no agreements had been made with Germany since the conclusion of the modus vivendi. As things are at present, the German maximum tariff will come into force against American imports on June 30th next, if nothing occurs in the meantime to prevent it.

AMERICA AND THE RUSSIAN FAMINE.

Washington, March 4.

President Roosevelt has sent a contribution to the Committee founded in New York for the relief of the famine-stricken districts of Russia, and in an accompanying letter has demanded further contributions for this object with the remark that Russia has been a good friend of America.

THE BRAZILIAN NAVY.

London, March 4.

According to an announcement in the Standard the firm of Vickers Son & Maxim in Barrow on Furness, has received an order from the Brazilian Government to build, in place of the battleship already ordered, a considerably larger one, corresponding in size to the "Dreadnought" and armed with ten 12-inch guns. It will be the largest ship ever constructed at this yard.

SERIOUS STREET FIGHTING IN ITALY.

The Avanti reports from Gravina in Apulia that desperate fighting has taken place between Socialists holding a demonstration and the police; 30 of the former were wounded and many arrests were made. An interpellation will be made in the House on March 5th by the Socialist fraction on the matter.

THE WRECK OF THE "BERLIN."

Hook of Holland, March 4.

Prince Henry of the Netherlands accompanied by his mother, Duchess Marie of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, proceeded today on board the pilot ship "Helvoetsluis" to the wreck of the "Berlin". All those who took part in the rescue were on board. The ship was anchored and the Prince made a speech, and handed to each of the rescuers in the name of the Queen, with words of high appreciation, the Order of the House of Orange. On returning ashore the Prince and his mother visited the patients in the Hotel America. A large crowd collected before the hotel and heartily cheered the Prince, the cheering being renewed when he appeared on the balcony and addressed the crowd, calling on them to cheer the intrepid men who at peril of their lives had saved the survivors of the disaster.

The "Berlin" is to be blown up with dynamite tomorrow.

THE LEWIS-BRADY CASE.

Few more complicated cases have been before the English law courts in recent years than that known as the Lewis-Brady Case. In December 1904 a cheque-book containing 25 cheques was issued to a young man named Lewis by the Crouch End branch of the London and South Western Bank. Lewis, apparently a perfectly respectable man, drew only three cheques and then, having exhausted his account all but a few shillings, drew no more cheques for some months. But in September 1906 a cheque for two pounds, undoubtedly taken from the same cheque-book, was cashed at a wine-merchant's in Kilburn. The cheque was refused by the bank and Lewis was arrested, tried, convicted of fraud and sentenced to 15 months hard labour. The principle witness against Lewis was a young girl named Marsh who swore that she saw him in Kilburn the night that the cheque was cashed. A few weeks ago the Daily Mail arose and barked furiously. "Miscarriage of justice", "an innocent man condemned", "wilful misdirection of the jury and suppression of evidence by the judge, Sir Ralph Little" were but a few of the charges made by this infuriated journal, which certainly succeeded in proving conclusively that Lewis was never in Kilburn at all on the night in question. The attention of the Home Secretary was called to the matter, and the girl Marsh having confessed that she had given false evidence against Lewis to save her lover Brady, who had admittedly been a friend of Lewis, the latter was at once released, but "without prejudice".

The girl Marsh is now awaiting trial at the Old Bailey for perjury at the Lewis trial; Brady, who has been in trouble before in the matter of a stolen bicycle, is also on trial for intent to defraud. Against these two the issues are clear, but now Brady comes forward with a statement that Lewis, while he had nothing to do with the actual cashing of the cheque, was the instigator and suggester of the whole fraud. Brady, it seems, is a man of good education, having been at Stoneyhurst college. Financial losses caused his removal from college and immigration to London where he entered a solicitor's office and also became very proficient at painting and attended musical classes at South Kensington, and on his release from prison after his little trouble over the bicycle earned his living by painting and singing at concerts. The suggestion in regard to the cheques came, according to Brady, from Lewis during a country walk. Lewis said, "I have a cheque-book with a number of unused cheques in it. It is a pity to waste these cheques. What can we do with them?" He (Lewis) added, "If I had £5 I could make a lot of money at Alexandra Park races." It was then that the frauds were hatched. No satisfactory explanation has ever been given by Lewis as to the whereabouts of the unused cheques, and it will be somewhat amusing if, after the frenzied shrieks of the Daily Mail as to the alleged conviction of an innocent man, a second Dreyfus and what not, Lewis should turn out to be the greatest rascal of the three.

LOCAL.

A theatrical entertainment in aid of the Funds of All Saints' Church will be given in the Meinholds Säle on Wednesday, April 10th at 8 p. m. Mr. W. S. Gilbert's two act comedy "Sweethearts" will be performed, preceded by a farce in one act.

The "Lustige Witwe" has long been with us and now at the Central Theatre is being performed nightly another great success which has already reached its century performance in Berlin, namely Kadelburg's comedy-farce "Husarenfieber". With all deference to the author a piece of this sort depends practically altogether on its interpretation, for the plot is of the slightest. It is understood that its main theme is founded on fact, for rumour hath it that no less a person than His Majesty the Emperor, when visiting Crefeld, was pleased to listen to the complaints of a fair citizeness who demurred at the lack of dancing men in the town, and to transfer a cavalry regiment thither to supply the deficiency. Accordingly, in "Husarenfieber" a regiment of Hussars is quartered in Jackshéwo, a heaven-forsaken place on the Russian frontier, where the officers are boring themselves to death. Suddenly they are transferred to a flourishing town in central Germany where they are received with open arms not only by the fair maidens dwelling there, but by their parents. Naturally, as the comedy proceeds, the male parents get heartily sick of the military element which monopolises their wives, sisters, daughters &c. but in the end they are forced or tricked into giving their consent to various betrothals, while even the bachelor Colonel of the regiment succumbs to the charms of a "gay widow". But, after all, in a piece of this nature, which goes with a swing from start to finish and in which there is hardly a dull moment, the plot is of small account, it is the actors that make it and, as often happens, one actor in particular. The management have been fortunate enough to persuade Herr Felix Schweighofer to emerge from a retirement, well earned after many years service on the boards, and take the chief comedian rôle. Stagecraft he has at his fingers ends, personality he has galore, and his picture of the garrulous, military-hating manufacturer is well nigh perfect. It reminds one of the only Arthur Roberts in his palmy days or the inimitable Penley as the original "Charley's Aunt", when one sees the other characters having to wait so long until the roars of laughter caused by Herr Schweighofer's drolleries have subsided, before they can proceed. As a piece of rich, ripe comedy, hardly if at all exaggerated, his performance is worth going to see, and laugh at and with many times. He is also extremely well supported; Herr Ottbert as the Colonel plays excellently, especially in the scene with Frau von Farenholtz, most piquantly played by Fräulein Clemens, while the Lieutenants and their loves, the fathers and their wives, the maidservants and their gay Lothario of an orderly are all to the manner born. The piece is most adequately mounted and should command the success in Dresden it has already enjoyed elsewhere.

The guards in the city today are furnished by the 1st Grenadier Regiment No. 100. The band plays about 12.40 p. m. in the Schloss Platz.

GENERAL NEWS.

(From our London correspondent.)

The following message has been sent by Prince Ranjitsinhji to the British nation, in reply to congratulations on being officially recognised as the Jam Sahib of Nawanager:—"God bless the Emperor-King, his Empire and his People. I hope still to retain the regard, affection, and esteem of my British friends and the British Public by playing the Game on another field."

At a meeting of the Privy Council last Friday King Edward signified approval by "pricking" the list of the selection of sheriffs to serve during the ensuing year.

An erroneous statement was made towards the end of last week in some of the papers, that Queen Alexandra was leaving England on Monday with the King. Such was never intended by her Majesty who will not join the King until they meet for their yachting cruise, at Marseilles after the termination of the present visit of King Edward to Biarritz.

The second Court of this season was held by the King and Queen at Buckingham Palace on Friday night last; it was again well attended, the floral decorations of the state apartments being very beautiful.

A black gown embroidered in India was worn by Queen Alexandra, with a silver corsage and train to correspond. Her ornaments were pearls and diamonds. The Princess of Wales wore a Princesse gown and train of white satin, the dress being embroidered all over with silver and gold and jewels, whilst the train was trimmed with fine Brussels point lace.

Whereas only one Duchess was present at the first Court, this one was attended by the Duchess of Sutherland in white satin with lilies embroidered on it in silver thread. Adeline, Duchess of Bedford in Parma violet, panelled with rose point lace, and the Duchess of Buccleuch also handsomely attired. The only Duke present, however, was his Grace of Sutherland.

There was a very small attendance of the Royal Family, consisting of the Prince and Princess of Wales, Prince Christian and Prince Francis of Teck.

An interesting presentation among the brides, was that of Lady Gerard who was married last autumn. She was presented by her mother-in-law Mary, Lady Gerard and was gowned in white chiffon and lace, touched with silver.

Mrs. Arthur Levita, daughter of Lady Agnes Cooper and a niece of the Duke of Fife, was also presented in a becoming Paquin dress of white satin covered with Brussels lace and sprinkled with crystal dewdrops.

Notable amongst the beautiful Americans was Mrs. Frederick Guest, the wife of the third son of Lord Wimborne. This lady is tall and graceful and possesses an altogether picturesque appearance. Her dress of white satin and train of cloth of silver exactly suited the beauty of the wearer.

An almost royal debutante was Miss Daphne Fitz George, a granddaughter of the late Duke of Cambridge, who wore a simple gown of white pleated chiffon, trimmed with Louis Seize bows in satin ribbon.

Lady Violet Brassey was one of the most admired of the young married women and is the daughter of the Duke of Richmond. She was dressed in pale blue and silver over soft satin with long lines of silver on the skirt.

Another remarkable presentation was that of Mrs. Henry de la Pasture, the novelist and playwright whose dress of écarle chiffon was entirely veiled with Brussels lace, and finely embroidered all over with trails of wistaria.

Prince Edward of Wales, has passed his preliminary examination for entry into the Royal College, Ostbourne.

Prince Henry of the Netherlands who has been appointed an honorary Knight Grand Cross of the Bath, has among his fellow-knights the Emperor of Abyssinia, the Kings of Norway and Denmark, the Sultan of Morocco, the Khedive of Egypt, and more than twenty reigning and non-reigning German princes. The insignia will be conveyed to Prince Henry by Prince Alexander of Teck who left yesterday for Holland.

For the luncheon to be given by the Houses of Parliament to the Colonial Premiers, King Edward has placed Westminster Hall at the disposal of Parliament in order to add to the dignity and importance of the occasion. The Committee have of course availed themselves of his Majesty's offer, which has met with general approval.

The plans for the entertainment will be much on the same lines as those that were adopted for the officers of the French fleet and the members of the Inter-Parliamentary Conference in the same Hall, and it is expected that the Speaker will preside at one table and the Lord Chancellor at the other.

After all the sensation created by the reports of an Irish whiskey fraud, it turns out that no fraud has been committed, and that the Distillery Company is entirely free from what was alleged against it. It now transpires that the pipe so often alluded to was put in by the local Urban Council for the ordinary purposes of a water supply.

What has really happened is that a dealer in spirits kept his certificate and stock books in his duty-paid warehouse, in a manner which contravenes the regulations of the Inland Revenue authorities. There is no question of fraud, and for the explanation of the manner in which the certificates were kept, we must await the proceedings in the Irish courts.

Lieutenant Tryon who disappeared so mysteriously from the Hotel Metropole, London on January 31st and who was found last week, in Edinburgh, where he had enlisted had an interview with his father and has cleared up all the mystery. This at present remains private and as to the charge, it can hardly be termed one of desertion as he enlisted into another regiment. It now rests with the War Office, but it is believed that he will be ordered to rejoin his unit.

Sir R. Romer and his colleagues have intimated that they are prepared to examine the materials in possession of the Home Office and to give their advice on the Edalji case to the Home Secretary who has accepted their offer. Some delay had occurred through the withdrawal of Sir R. Romer on account of private matters which had unexpectedly arisen. Sir A. de Rutzen consented to fill the vacancy thus created, and they immediately proceeded to examine the papers.

Two of the greatest German tenors were originally cabdrivers. Theodor Wachtel made his name in the title-rôle of the "Postillion von Longjumeau", in which his skill in cracking the postillion's whip stood him in good stead. During the sixties, he appeared in Grand Opera both in London and Paris.

Heinrich Bötzel was the other cabdriver, and had an even better voice but suffered from a poor personal appearance. The effect of his marvellous rendering of Addio Leonora sung behind the scene in "Il Trovatore" was not assisted by the ludicrous figure he made on emerging from the wings.

It was Pollini, the director of the Hamburg Opera House, who found both these singers and it was a standing joke among the young men of Hamburg to start a whole rank of drivers singing at the tops of their voices, by shouting "Pollini kommt!"

Captain Donelan, M.P., sent a telegram to Queens-town Urban Council, which was read, intimating that the Admiralty had decided to lengthen the graving dock at Hawlbowl, that a sum of £110,000 had been included in the Naval Estimates for the purpose, and that £20,000 would be expended on the work during the current year. The Council received the news with great satisfaction.

Lady Grey-Egerton, the widow of Sir Philip Grey-Egerton, who was formerly Miss Cuyler of New York was married in London on Saturday last to Mr. McCreery, a well-known New Yorker. They have taken Lord Ormawhite's place, Warfield, near Ascot, for the summer.

With the death of Lady Ripon, no less than three of the most prominent members of the Cabinet have become widowers. Sir Edward Grey, Secretary for Foreign Affairs was the first, then the Premier, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, and now the Marquis of Ripon, Lord Privy Seal.

Taximeter motor-cabs which were to have started in London on the 1st are all ready and waiting but a delay has been caused by the Home Office, in order to revise the proposed cab fares under the Act of 1853. This ridiculous delay has caused general disappointment.

Madame Waddington, who is staying in London, was again received by the King and Queen last week as their Majesties are devoted to this wonderfully bright and clever American lady.

MUSICAL NOTES.

The sixth concert of the Royal Conservatorium, at the Palmengarten on Monday evening, opened with a pianoforte performance; two pupils of the class Vetter giving, without notes, an exact and intelligent rendering of the long and difficult first movement, Allegro, of Beethoven's Concerto in G, op. 58. The only other pianoforte number was the last on the programme, Mendelssohn's Concerto in G-minor, which seemed to have been well chosen with regard to the pupil's proficiency; it was played throughout with much feeling and expression, as well as good tone and execution, by a member of the R. Feigerl class, Herr Rudolf Feigerl at the second instrument. A trumpet Fantasia was a surprise in the excellence of its performance by a member of the class Fricke; the "tonguing" as well as the finger technique, tone quality, smoothness of execution, and expression in cantilene, being alike remarkable in a beginner. The player wore Hussar uniform. Another surprise performance was that of a pupil of the class Wille, who played, with infallible tone and feeling, a long Concerto for violoncello. (Klughardt, op. 59) containing many difficult passages and pathetic melodies. This was played by the soloist from memory, and accompanied by Herr Pretsch. The remaining numbers were vocal, representing four classes. A pupil of Fräulein Orgeni was entrusted with the Recitative and Aria "O zittre nicht", from Mozart's "Zauberflöte". The voice showed painful nervousness at first, but soon improved; its range and quality, together with the dignity and purity of the young artist's style, gave clear promise of future distinction. A highly gifted pupil of Fräulein v. Kotzebue sang, with mature power of feeling and refined musical expression, Dvorák's beautiful "An den Wassern zu Babylon", R. Strauss' "Morgen", and Hugo Wolf's "Über Nacht" and "Heimweh"—a small programme in itself, admirably chosen and touchingly performed. The other vocal number was a performance by a trio of voices—two from the class of Frau Braunroth and one from that of Herr Mann, trained for concerted singing by Herr Kluge—of two charming compositions by Rischbieter. Herr Kluge was at the pianoforte, and all went very well.—G.

The remainder of the series of Conservatorium performances will take place as follows:

On Friday evening next, at 7.30, in the hall of the Conservatorium Landhaus Strasse 11, II; an operatic performance for the Patrons' Society.

On Saturday evening the 9th instant, at 7.30, at the Palmengarten the seventh concert (Foundation school).

On Monday evening the 11th instant, at 7.30, in the Kreuzkirche, the eighth concert. Admission to this concert is free to all who buy a programme at the doors of the Church.

On Wednesday evening the 13th instant, at 7.30, in the hall of the Conservatorium; a theatrical performance for the Patrons' Society.

On Friday evening the 15th instant, at 7.30, in the Vereinshaus; the ninth concert, with orchestra.

On Wednesday evening the 20th instant, at seven o'clock, in the Gewerbehause; the tenth and last of the series of concerts.

PLOT. Marie has been found and educated by a French sergeant, Sulpice, and the whole of his regiment worship her. Her lover Tonio is about to be hung as a spy, but Marie intervenes, telling how Tonio saved her life; they relent and Tonio joins their ranks. The Marchesa di Maggiorivoglio appears, and claims Marie as her niece, and refusing to hear of her marrying a common soldier, carries her away to her castle, where she is surrounded by instructors in singing, dancing &c.—but her heart is with her soldiers. To her delight they arrive, with Tonio, who has been made an officer, at their head. The Marchesa still refuses to consent to their marriage, and confides to Marie that she is really her mother. A great festival is arranged to celebrate Marie's betrothal with a young Duke, when the soldiers appear and Sulpice tells the story of Marie's life. The Marchesa relents, Tonio and Marie are united, and the high-born guests retire disgusted.

LATEST TELEGRAMS.

Paris, March 5. The Radical parties are pressing the Government more and more to publish the papers seized at the late Nuntiatore. The Senator M. Ranc writes in the Aurore: "People are already wondering why these documents have not been published and are asking the reasons of the delay, as the wish has been generally expressed that full light should be shed on the intrigues of the Vatican and the co-operation they have met with in France." M. Ranc adds: "Rumours are in circulation that this delay or, it had better be said, this opposition proceeds from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, where strong clerical influence still prevails and there is a desire to save certain officials who are in danger. That would no longer be possible after the publication of the Montagnini papers. If the rumours are correct, we rely upon the Minister of Foreign Affairs, M. Pichon, to put an end to such machinations."

St. Petersburg, March 5. M. Golowin has been elected President of the Duma by 331 votes. M. Komjakov received 91 votes, Kuamin Karawajev 3, Stachowitach 2, and Teslenko 1.

St. Petersburg, March 5. Noon. The weather is fine, and the streets present a lively scene. The approach to the Tauris Palace is blocked by police and gendarmes; all the streets in the neighbourhood of the Palace are full of people who greet the deputies on their way to the Duma with cheers and cries of "Amnesty". The opening of the Duma will be preceded by a solemn Te Deum conducted by the Metropolitan Antonius and the two Bishops, Platon and Eulogius, who are members of the Duma. The Metropolitan will then deliver an address, exhorting the members to forget their differences and to work in unity and peace for the welfare of the suffering country. The National Hymn will be sung by a choir at the conclusion of the address. The Premier and all the Ministers will be present.
