TERRIBLE ACCIDENT IN CANADA.

A report comes from Ottawa that the new Quebec bridge has collapsed; 50 people have lost their lives. According to another account the tale of victims totals 250.

A later telegram places the number of victims at 50. It is believed that the collapse, which took place at the South end of the bridge over a distance of a quarter of a mile, was caused by a contractor's train passing over that section.

PLAGUE CASES IN 'FRISCO.

The plague has made its appearance in San Francisco, seven cases having terminated fatally. The Federal authorities have sent a doctor from the naval hospital to the city. The Quarantine authorities give the assurance that there is no cause for anxiety.

AMERICAN RAILWAY TARIFFS.

The Federal Court of the United States has been requested to prohibit eighteen railways which start from Chicago from setting in force on September 1 a new tariff which, it is alleged, will seriously damage the complainants, proprietors of dairies in various parts of the United States.

THE CENTRAL AMERICAN REPUBLICS.

Reuter's Bureau reports from Washington that telegraphic messages had been received on Thursday by the State Department from all the Central American Republics except Guatemala, thanking the Presidents Roosevelt and Diaz for their efforts to secure a lasting peace. All expressed their belief that those efforts would be successful. A direct answer had been received from San Salvador, accepting the proffered services.

THE GERMAN EMPRESS MAKING GOOD PROGRESS.

In spite of the unfavourable weather H. M. the Empress, who is still confined to a couch, was able to go for a drive in the park at Wilhelmshöhe on Thursday afternoon.

THE HAGUE CONFERENCE.

Committee A of the Arbitration Committee resolved that the jurisdiction of the obligatory arbitration court shall not extend to such subjects as to which the national courts are called upon to decide, for instance as to literary or artistic property, but only to such questions as the Government or its administrative authorities would have to settle. The Swiss proposal, which contains a list of obligatory arbitration cases, but which makes the proviso that the Governments should only announce their agreement to the categories therein contained at the ratification of the treaty, was rejected by 10 votes to 5. In spite of the differences of opinion the Delegates expect that an agreement will finally be reached.

THE ATTEMPT ON THE CZAR'S LIFE.

The Court martial at St Petersburg delivered its verdict in the conspiracy trial on Thursday. Nikitenko, Sinjavski alias Purkin, and Naumov were found guilty of making an attempt on the Czar's life and were condemned to be hanged. Of four prisoners accused of having formed an organization for the overthrow of the existing form of Government, three have been sentenced to 8 years penal servitude and one to 4 years penal servitude. Five other accused were sentenced to exile and loss of civil rights for supporting the conspiracy. Six accused were acquitted, among them the attorney Feodosjeff and his wife.

six persons, who have for a long time been mischievous near Porcharevatz, was on Wednesday rendered harmless by the police in the village of Kumane. The leader of the band and two men were killed in the struggle. The rest of the band, among them a woman, surrendered after a prolonged resistance.

FISHERMEN ATTACK A JUDGE IN ICELAND.

The district judge Lindal at Siglufjord has condemned some 50 foreign fishing boats to fines amounting to from 30 to 50,000 kronen for fishing in forbidden waters. The sentences have aroused much bitterness among the foreign fishermen. On Sunday some hundred sailors armed with knives came ashore and threatened the district judge who took refuge in a church, where divine service was being held. A great crowd collected, among them men with firearms who drove the sailors back to their ships. Several persons were wounded by stabs. The inspecting vessel "Islands Falk" has arrived at Siglufjord.

THE MOROCCAN CRISIS.

THE SITUATION UNCHANGED.

Admiral Philibert telegraphed on Wednesday that the political situation was unaltered. No European had left Saffi or Mogador although the S. S. "Anatolie" was lying in readiness to take fugitives on board. The Moroccans attacked the camp before Casablanca but were vigorously repulsed.

In an attack made by the Moors on the town during the night of the 28th, two men on the French side were killed and two wounded.

The Transport steamship "Shamrock" has reached Casablanca.

FIRE IN CASABLANCA.

The Agence Havas announces that on Tuesday last, presumably owing to an unfortunate accident, a fire broke out in the Arab quarter of Casablanca near the Mahalla's camp. Several houses containing stores of grain and straw were gutted.

AN IMPORTANT TRIBE INACTIVE.

Several natives report that the Medinas tribe, 3,000 strong, is encamped in the vicinity of Taddert, is absolutely inactive, and appears to be awaiting Muley Hafid's instructions. Several tribes are reproaching the Medinas with wanting to treat with the French.

THE PRETENDER REPORTED DEAD.

The London Tribune learns from Tangier that the Pretender El Roghi is dead.

THE SITUATION OF THE EUROPEANS.

The Morning Post hears from Tangier that the garrison there has received orders from El Gebbas, Minister of War, to repair to Fez.

Another journal announces from Tangier that the Europeans coming from Fez have reached Larash. There are men, women and children, 60 in all. The Sultan has given them a mounted escort of 150 men.

The Kölnische Zeitung learns that the German Embassy in Tangier is to be a place of assembly for the German Colony in case of danger.

The English Consul in Tangier has advised all British subjects in case of an attack on the town to betake themselves to certain places of refuge pointed out by him and placed in a condition of defence.

To reassure the European colony in Tangier the armoured cruiser "Desaix" was to leave Toulon last evening for Tangier. The torpedo-boat destroyer "Dard" will also leave for Morocco to recruit the wireless telegraphy service.

VARIOUS REPORTS FROM MOROCCO.

The Figaro learns from Mazagan that Muley Hafid's horsemen prevented the delivery of ammunition which belonged to the Maghzen and was intended for Tangier.

The Paris papers give no details of the fight on Wednesday last, but the Matin's correspondent in Casablanca speaks of artillery fire against the hordes of horsemen who advanced from an Easterly direction. Natives say that there are 10,000 Moroccans in the neighbourhood of Casablanca.

A Reuter's Bureau telegram from Casablanca on the 28th instant reports that the course of events appears to render it expedient for the French expeditionary corps to advance as soon as possible in the direction of Taddert, which lies from 12 to 15 kilometers South of Casablanca. The greatest difficulty to be overcome would be the supply of water and means of conveyance; all the available carts, mules, and horses had already been collected.

According to the Petit Parisien, the Cabinet Council to be held today at Rambouillet would be engaged in considering a plan drawn up by General Picquart and M. Thompson for the organisation of the French police in the harbour towns Rabat, Saffi, Mogador, and Mazagan.

According to his latest despatch, General Drude intends to employ two battalions of infantry, all his cavalry, a field battery and a mountain battery on the march which is to take place to Taddert. Two battalions of infantry and a field battery will form the reserve. The Spanish are to take over the protection of the town.

A later telegram from Tangier states that Muley Hafid called upon the authorities in Mazagan to acknowledge him as Sultan, otherwise he would employ force. Six hundred armed men awaited the reply of the authorities at a distance of two hours' journey from the town. Muley Hafid's letter was read in the Mosque, and Abdul Asiz was declared unworthy to remain Sultan any longer, after the occupation of Ujdja and Casablanca by the French. Muley Hafid was proclaimed Sultan. The same thing is expected to occur in other towns on the coast. On the other hand Abdul Asiz had recalled the troops sent against Raisuli and the Elkmes, in order to take the field against the usurping Sultan.

ALARMING ACCIDENT.

In the editorial rooms of the journal Noticias in Oporto a lecture was taking place in the presence of a large audience on Wednesday when suddenly the floor collapsed. Ten persons were killed and eleven injured.

A later telegram states that the number of persons present when the accident happened was about 100. Far more persons were injured than was at first apparent; eighty are being treated in the hospitals, while a number received aid in chemists' shops. The accident has had an overwhelming effect upon the populace. In the mortuary and during the transference of the corpses pitiable scenes were witnessed.

WRECK OF A SAILING SHIP.

The sailing ship "Prussia", bound from Norfolk to Fort Townsend in Flenders bay, South West Australia, has foundered. Captain Jameson shot himself; 14 passengers and 4 of the crew were drowned.

PORTUGUESE MINERS STRIKE.

Two thousand men employed at the Sao Domingues mines, who demand an eight hours' day, have gone on strike.

ANOTHER RIOT AT A WRESTLING MATCH.

At the wrestling contests in the Circus Sporn in Düsseldorf on Wednesday evening the world's champion Koch was thrown fairly on to both shoulders by the Russian Chemjakin. On announcement of the result the audience swarmed into the ring and protested amid a regular tumult. Koch declares the Russian tripped him and demands a return contest.

THE EDALJI CASE.

The Home Secretary in a Parliamentary paper just issued states that the action of the South Staffordshire police in the now notorious Edalji case has been correct in every way. It is a strange commentary on this statement that the Great Wyrley district has been once more disturbed by the discovery that two more outrages on animals have been perpetrated in the neighbourhood of Harrison's Colliery, Great Wyrley. Two miners were on their way to work on Tuesday morning when they found a brown mare dead, with a 19in. wound across the body. A second, aged, grey mare was standing near with a gash 10in. long, and on the arrival of Mr. Forsyth, veterinary surgeon, he found that it was necessary to shoot her. One of the animals won a silver cup at the Walsall Agricultural Show. Both animals were the property of Messrs. Harrison (Limited), colliery owners and farmers, who lost two cows in June, 1903, by the same atrocious means. In the opinion of the veterinary surgeon the wounds were inflicted by a sharp instrument.

There can, of course, be no question of George Edalji's complicity in this fresh crime, as he has not been in the district for some months. Sir A. Conan Doyle boldly asserts that he could in a moment place his hand on the criminal, who is an utter degenerate living in Great Wyrley. A curious feature of the case is that the Rev. S. Edalji has received another anonymous letter, written, as he believes, in the same handwriting as the other letters, foretelling the speedy proof of his son's innocence. It is to be hoped that Scotland Yard detectives will be sent to supplement the efforts of their Staffordshire colleagues.

A NEEDLESS CHASE.

There are perhaps few more undignified moments in life than when one is chasing one's hat down a street with a gusty wind causing the hat to ever elude one's efforts to capture it. With the usual total depravity of inanimate things, as Mark Twain would have it, the hat on these occasions is invariably a new one. A day or two ago a young exquisite was parading the streets of Berlin conscious that his elegant appearance was calculated to give pleasure to all the passers-by, when suddenly a gust of wind whirled away his hat. Reflecting with a pang that the cherished headgear was brand-new he flew after it, watching it with anguish as it bounded away, making the casual acquaintance of every puddle in its path. More than once he was within an ace of grasping it, but even as he stooped to reclaim it another gust of wind would hurry it away upon its wild career. At last success crowned his efforts, once more he held the hat in his hands, but as he leaned exhausted against a lamp-post to recover his breath, a bareheaded stranger paused before him, and thanking him profusely took the hat from him. Gasping with astonishment the young man ejaculated "Here, that's my hat". "Pardon me," replied the stranger, "it is mine; yours is hanging on your back." It then flashed into the young man's mind that that very morning when purchasing his hat, he had reflected that it was a gusty day and had secured his new hat to his buttonhole by a hat-guard. His frantic rush along the streets had been more altruistic than he had intended.

LETTERS FROM FINLAND.

(From our London correspondent.)

MORE IMPRESSIONS.

Imola, Imatra, August 26.

After spending a few pleasant days in or near Helsingfors, always with friends who, whilst keeping me so busy with various entertainments and "functions" that I had very little time left for letter-writing and serious work, yet gave me, also, interesting information about Finland, political and social, I have come here, for a little rest cure and a look round.

Unfortunately the Weather Clerk has been no kinder to me in Finland than in Old England of late. Since my arrival at Helsingfors, exactly a week ago today, every day has been cold and wet, in fact entirely unseasonable, as my Finnish friends keep telling me on every occasion. Indeed, they assure me that summer has this year departed for good from Finland more than a month ago, and they seem somewhat surprised when I tell them that they are certainly no worse off here than we have been in England.

Considering that weather conditions have been so unpropitious, I cannot complain that I have been unable to see anything, albeit I might have seen more, and undoubtedly in better circumstances, otherwise.

The longer I stay in Finland, the stronger my affection for the "Land of a Thousand Lakes" and its people grows, and the more I am struck by its resemblance to, its affinities with, Holland, in many ways. The Finnish landscape reminds me very much of the Dutch landscape, though it is, of course, upon a much smaller scale. And the ways and manners of the Finlanders, especially in the villages, not so much perhaps in the towns, have the same characteristics as those of the Hollanders. Naturally the dress is entirely different, a result of divergent climates, whilst it has to be kept in view that the Finnish national costumes have vanished to a far greater extent than the Dutch national costumes, at least in many parts of the country.

It must not be forgotten, too, that the resemblance and the affinities between Finland and Holland are strongest in the Swedish elements of the Finnish people. Those elements may have weakened since the Home Rule movement, initiated by the so-called "Young Finlanders", more than thirty years ago, has become more pronounced and powerful, but the Swedes in Finland are still an influential party. Intelligent Finnish "Home Rulers", although they may be strongly in favour of "Finland for the Finlanders", yet feel that, intellectually, Finland owes a great deal to Sweden, realising at the same time that it is doubtful whether the Swedes were the first in the land, preceding the Finlanders, or whether the latter were the real aborigines. For this reason, many of the educated Finnish "Home Rulers" are in alliance with the Swedish Finlanders. They went to the polls together when the elections for the new Diet took place last March, and they voted for the same candidates.

It is true that the allies were badly defeated, mainly by the Socialists and the Labour Party, but it remains to be seen whether the new Diet will be able to accomplish much, the majority being what it is, composed almost exclusively of people without political experience and influence, the men of experience, education, and thought having all been driven out.

American Bar Lila Hölle.

Scheffel Strasse 32.
English Buffet.—Cocktails.—Flips.—English Cooking.

I have read in one of the numerous guide-books, published by "Finlandia", one of the two Tourist Associations of Finland, and not the foremost, perhaps, of the two, an article by Professor J. E. Rosberg in which he observes, not without truth:

"The country is known by the name of 'the Land of a Thousand Lakes', but could equally with good reason be called 'the Land of a Hundred Thousand Lakes' without the number, however, corresponding to the real sum, even if one reckoned the smaller lakes.

"Moreover most of the lakes are found on the so-called sea-plateau, in the inner parts of the Southern half of the country, whereby the abundance of water in that district is particularly imposing. If one looks at the country from a height, the lakes glitter on all sides bordered in a green frame of forest-clad hills and ridges. One feels confused and finds it difficult to discover one's way in the maze of land and water; one does not enquire the names of the lakes, but lets the glance with delight follow the winding and curving lines.

"The same landscape pictures are repeated almost wherever one lets the glance wander over a larger district within the sea-plateau. Little cultivations disappear before the ever dominating land and water. Green and blue are here Nature's national colours. If one goes towards the coast, other landscape pictures are met with. Here the country is flat, without, for that reason, offering the really extensive views of a plain.

"Small eminences rise here and there, the forest varying with cultivated ground and brooks winding lazily through flat clay land. Only where the surface of the lake-plateau, lying but a hundred metres above the sea-level, breaks through the still lower lying coast the great rivers which empty the lake-plateau's wide waters form the powerful rapids.

"Towards the north and north-east, the land rises gradually, the lakes become fewer and smaller, the hills larger and finally bare on the summits, forests and mosses more and more dominant."

But what Prof. Rosberg writes of the lakes of Finland (in more or less intelligible English.—The Editor.) applies, with equal truth, to the islands, both in the lakes and on the extensive coasts of the Grand Duchy. The islands are, indeed, perhaps more innumerable than the lakes, and Prof. Rosberg recognises the fact, without saying it in so many words:

"Has one (the necessary) means of conveyance at one's disposal, one can venture out on the 'voyage of discovery', in this labyrinth of islands. One steers in to a narrow water, which apparently ends blindly like a bay; one comes further in, in the ostensible bay and finds that it opens itself, becomes a sound, which leads out towards new fiords, a new maze of channels and islands. On the lake-plateau one will find almost similar landscape pictures, an amphibian land like the Archipelago, but with less water, and land which seems more as if soldered together.

"The Archipelago has, however, a more severe character than the lake landscape. Where the former has knotty, wind resisting pine trees and smooth granite rocks by the shores, the latter has a tender undergrowth of alder and osiers, which in many places go down to the edge of the water; where the Archipelago has fresh salt air, long swells from the sea penetrating in through the sounds, and endless perspective out towards the Gulf of Finland and the Baltic, the lake landscape has mild summer winds, soft contours and short, sharp waves and a dreamlike character."

I do not want to be made responsible for the Professor's English, but I thoroughly understand him, and the D. R.'s readers will also, very likely.

I am staying here with an eminent Wiborger, the citizen of perhaps the most German sea-port of Finland, Imola being his country house, close to his important paper and saw mills, created and developed by him on adjacent lake islands. Those works were most interesting to visit, and the owner, naturally, took a pride in showing me everything.

Then he has likewise taken me to the most famous show-places in this neighbourhood. Foremost among them is, of course, the Imatra, not so much a waterfall or waterfalls as rapids formed by the Wucksen River, descending from the Saima Lake to the Ladoga Lake. Imatra is certainly very striking, but as it has been so often described, I will refrain from repetitions. The visitors are mostly Russians, which is very natural, St. Petersburg being (comparatively) so near. The Finnish Government has built at Imatra, which is reached from Wiborg, after about two hours in a very slow train, a solid looking and large hotel in stone and brick, which replaces a wooden building burnt down a few years ago.

An iron bridge over the Imatra leads to this hotel, which the Government has leased to contractors. The bridge is scarcely an ornament, but has, I suppose, become a necessary "improvement" of the present time! Close to the hotel stands the "Pavillion", whence one can enjoy the finest views over the Imatra.

CURRENT TOPICS IN AMERICA.

(By letter dated August 17th, from our New York correspondent.)

CRIME IN AMERICA.

There have not been wanting attempts to hold certain elements among the immigrants responsible for the increase of crime in the United States, and in particular for the flood of crime which has for some time been noticeable in the city of New York and other parts of the country. The circumstance that the probable authors of a number of shocking crimes in New York are Italians has already in certain quarters actually occasioned a hostile attitude to immigration in general, and its further limitation seems already to be a subject of discussion. In face of these attempts to condemn all immigration a Report on criminals and youthful offenders in the United States just issued by the Census Bureau in Washington is of peculiar interest. From this Report one gathers that the number of convicted persons born abroad has become smaller; while, on the other hand, an increase of native-born convicts is apparent. On June 30 1904, omitting youthful offenders in reformatories and kindred institutions, 81,772 persons were in gaol, so that out of every million inhabitants 1,066 are convicts. On June 1st 1890 there were only 66,803 persons in gaol, but still that means 1,067 convicts to every million inhabitants, so that the percentage has fallen between 1890 and 1904. In the course of these 14 years in many States so called probationary and parole systems have been introduced, whereby many of the lesser ill doers have been released from prison; the percentage has, therefore, undergone a visible reduction. It is probable that this leniency in criminal matters affects women more than men. For example, while in 1880 the percentage of female convicts was 8.5, in 1890 it fell to 7.8 and in 1904 to 5.5. In June 1904 there were many more coloured persons among the convicts than in 1890. Foreign-born whites among the convicts fell from 28.3 per cent in 1890 to 23.7 per cent in 1904, while the number of native-born whites from being 71.8 per cent of all the white convicts in 1890 rose to 76.3 per cent in 1904.

In the whole country during 1904 were condemned: 34,753 persons for drunkenness; 28,339 as vagabonds; 17,264 for breaches of peace; 25,058 for theft; 10,877 for assault; 7,161 for burglary; 2,444 for homicide; and 106 were condemned to death. Lifelong imprisonment was the lot of 640 persons, among them 20 women. The number of youthful criminals, of ages between 7 and 21, on June 1st in 1890 was 14,846 while in 1904 it rose to 23,034. The number of foreign-born children of white parents amounted to only 11 per cent of the whole number of youthful criminals.

A TEDDY-BEAR VISITS TEDDY.

Great excitement prevailed recently at Sagamore Hill, the country seat of President Roosevelt at Oyster Bay. The secret service officials who are on duty night and day in the vicinity of Sagamore Hill in order to arrest suspicious persons, of whom there is no lack, while the President is there, heard one evening a rustling in the bushes. When they went to look for the cause they became pale with terror—a real bear stood before them! While they were debating whether they should shoot it dead or capture it alive, Bruin vanished. Suddenly they saw him again, but this time on the roof of the President's villa. Various bulldogs were whistled for and a bear hunt began. But the bear quietly jumped off the roof and vanished in the neighbouring wood. For three hours the search for him went on, but all in vain. For the inhabitants of Oyster Bay the bear-story is now the chief topic of conversation, and whenever a rustling is heard in the bushes, they believe the bear is close to them.

JUSTICE WHILE YOU WAIT.

Judge Carroll in Cheyenne, Wyoming, has just made quick work of an action. A man named Fitzgerald was accused of assault. His accuser, Albert Bristol, obtained an order for his arrest, and Judge Carroll telephoned to the accused who lived in a place 50 miles off to attend the trial. Fitzgerald begged the judge to settle the matter by telephone, as he had urgent business which prevented him attending the trial. The judge agreed. Both parties engaged attorneys, who attended the trial. Fitzgerald remained in his own village and his evidence was taken by telephone. The attorneys made their speeches and then the judge again

PLOT. Marie has been found and educated by a French sergeant, Sulpice, and the whole of his regiment worship her. Her lover Tonio is about to be hung as a spy, but Marie intervenes, telling how Tonio saved her life; they relent and Tonio joins their ranks. The Marchesa di Maggiorivoglio appears, and claims Marie as her niece, and refusing to hear of her marrying a common soldier, carries her away to her castle, where she is surrounded by instructors in singing, dancing &c.—but her heart is with her soldiers. To her delight they arrive, with Tonio, who has been made an officer, at their head. The Marchesa still refuses to consent to their marriage, and confides to Marie that she is really her mother. A great festival is arranged to celebrate Marie's betrothal with a young Duke, when the soldiers appear and Sulpice tells the story of Marie's life. The Marchesa relents, Tonio and Marie are united, and the high-born guests retire disgusted.

A COSTUME OF CLAY!

The President's daughter in a costume of clay! It is announced from Spearfish in S. Dakota that Mrs. Alice Roosevelt-Longworth, while touring with her husband and Vice-President Fairbanks through Yellowstone Park, had an accident. The party were looking at one of the giant clay-pits when Mrs. Longworth slipped and fell head-first into it. This was filled with soft, wet clay, and when the lady was extricated, she presented a curious spectacle. It is rumoured that instead of hastening to her aid with his accustomed gallantry her husband stood by in fits of laughter.

AMERICAN NAVAL GUNNERY.

The American Marine-Artillery has done a better performance than the British! It is announced from Washington that the recent statement as to the results of the British gunnery practice which took place in the presence of King Edward and caused him to bestow a decoration on one gun which was responsible for 21 shots, 19 of which were hits, has induced the American Marine Department to allow certain results of the last artillery practice to be published. On the cruiser "Maryland" a master-gunner in 11 shots with a 6-inch gun made 11 hits. Another broadside from the battleship "Ohio" shows a return of nothing but hits at a firing speed of 10.81 shots a minute. A 6-inch gun on the battleship "Maine" made nothing but hits at 10.41 shots a minute, and another from the "Missouri" did the same at 10.30 shots a minute. Still better results were obtained with smaller guns. A 3lb.-er on the "Virginia" fired 20 shots in 72 seconds, every time finding the target. Another gun was fired 10 times in 22 1/4 seconds and each shot hit the target.

SUBMARINE SIGNALLING.

After detailed experiments with the new discovery of submarine bell signals for reducing the number of collisions at sea, the U. S. Government has determined to fit with the apparatus five battle-ships, 10 coal-ships, six torpedo-boat-destroyers, the President's yacht "Mayflower" and the despatch-boat "Dolphin".

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE ON TRIAL.

Very soon the courts will have to decide, whether Christian Science, or faith healing, can justify its existence before the law. In New York a firm believer in Christian Science, Clarence Byrne, has been condemned to 30 days imprisonment for treating his child, who was suffering from inflammation of the lungs, with Christian Science methods instead of providing medical treatment. The child died. The case was examined by the city coroner and caused great excitement. At his trial, Byrne posed as a martyr. It is the first time that an adherent of Christian Science has been condemned in America under circumstances of this kind. The sentence is to be appealed against, in order to obtain a legal decision as to the right to exist of Christian Science.

The New York judge in question supported his action by the law which lays down that parents must provide suitable medical treatment when their children are ill.

JACK THE "ACID-SLINGER".

Jack the "acid-slinger" the terror of the ladies in Indianapolis has at last been rendered harmless. For three years he has been carrying on his objectionable methods, but at last he has been caught in flagrante delicto and arrested. This man, who has "slung" acid at hundreds of beautiful dresses in the streets of Indianapolis made a most remarkable confession in prison. His name is William R. Gadd, he is 30 years old, is an art student and appears to be dominated by a morbid impulse to ruin ladies' toilettes. An uncontrollable hatred of ladies' lovely frocks obsessed him. Whenever he saw an elegantly attired lady he poured on her silk dress some corrosive fluid from a bottle which he took out of his pocket.

AN OLD PEOPLE'S FÊTE.

An interesting German fête, the annual fête of the old German settlers of the "windy city" has just taken place in Chicago. The fête was a grand success. Medals were awarded as follows: The oldest German settler, Adam Breit settled in Chicago since 1846; the oldest German female settler Frau Anna Thies settled there since 1835; the oldest non-German male settler, Abraham B. Jackson, 1839; the oldest non-German female settler, Mrs. Elizabeth Outhet, 1832; the oldest married couples Franz and Elizabeth Werz, he 87 she 72 years old; Anton and Regina Hottinger, he 83 $\frac{3}{4}$ , she 74 $\frac{3}{4}$ ; settlers who have worked the longest time at the same place: Nicholas Thielmann for 45 years with the Illinois Central Railway, and Elizabeth Meier; head of a family with the largest number of descendants John Wagner, 6 children, 33 grandchildren, and 6 great-grandchildren. A dancing contest for the old people followed, the bouquet for the oldest pair was handed by Herr Höckster with a graceful speech to Herr N. Georgi and Frau Franziska Gross. Herr Georgi, who is 83, hardly dared to join the mazes of the waltz but Frau Gross, who bears her 91 years with the utmost cheerfulness finally prevailed on him to do so.

BIRDS ON THE BIOSCOPE.

Entirely new possibilities in photography in nature study—one may say in field lore—were revealed, according to a Times report, by Mr. Kearton, a few days ago, before a small gathering at the hall of the Institute of Journalists in London. It has been known for some time that he and his brother, whose photographs of birds are known all over the world, had been experimenting with the bioscope. In their endeavour to silence the machine they have not been altogether successful, though they have muffled its burr. But they have got over the difficulty in another way. Mr. Kearton has so successfully accustomed birds to his presence that they have allowed him to handle them, and have subsequently endured his apparatus with cheerfulness. The results are astounding. The photographers have chiefly been busy with young broods. The first series showed pipits, whitethroats, bullfinches, larks, spotted flycatchers, wrynecks, and sedge warblers, in each case the parents being engaged in feeding the young. You could follow every movement of the bird; watch the bullfinches bring out the pouched food in surprising quantity; the larks run along their little pathway, and carefully select each young bird in turn. The waving of the grass, the ruffling of the feathers, were quite distinct. The audience could not forbear a cheer when the sedge warbler, finding his mate on the nest, passed on the food, which she in turn passed on to the young. The second series showed mostly sea birds, many on the Farne Islands now happily preserved by a body of naturalists. Apart from some beautiful pictures of terns in flight, the most remarkable were the cormorants "unswallowing" their food with curious contortions, and the gannets building a nest on the Bass rock. But Mr. Kearton kept a climax. At the end there was shown a sparrow hawk feeding its young. Nothing comparable with this photograph has been hitherto approached, even by the American "fakers" recently attacked by Mr. Roosevelt. It was necessary to build up a stand close to the nest and work the bioscope from within a few feet. One would think it impossible, but the thing was done; and the whole long process of the bird pulling its prey to pieces on the edge of the nest, the clamouring of three of the four young, the savage gestures of the old bird and its curious favouritism, were shown with a realistic vividness beyond description. Yet Mr. Kearton and his brother are only at the beginning of the experiment. They are also attempting to reduce the phonograph to silence, but so far the sound of the needle on the cylinder has always made the bird stop his song to listen. We may express a hope that with the bioscope they will next attempt the swallow, which is easy to approach, and some of the wood-peckers, in order to show conclusively the curious predigestive process that some have denied.
