This will be the first performance of the complete work, which occupies a whole evening of the usual concert duration, since its original production under the direction of the composer at the annual meeting of the Allgemeiner Deutscher Musikverein at Frankfurt o. M. in 1904, when it evoked ecstatic enthusiasm and strong objection in equal measure.

In the wrestling at the Central Theater on Thursday evening the contest between Sturm, Berlin, and Romanoff, Russia, was a fine and worthy spectacle of its kind from beginning to end. As athlete figures of full normal but not excessive proportions both men were models—Sturm making up in point of symmetry, muscular development, and agility for whatever he may have lacked, in comparison with his opponent, in height and weight—both were at the top of their form, and both did their business-like and vigorous best to win. The issue was undecided at the end of the half-hour allowed. Jackson, Scotland, was defeated by his heavier antagonist, the Berlin champion Schneider, in 9 minutes. The previously undecided match between Bulgaria and Servia in the persons of their respective champions Petroff and Antonitch, was resumed. Petroff, unable to reach his gigantic adversary, resorted to consistently successful tactics of defence; finally, however, but only after several like attempts, turning the giant over on his back so that the points of his shoulders touched the ground. The referee promptly intervened and proclaimed Petroff victor. Antonitch lodged a protest at the judges' table, while Petroff was loudly cheered. The contest had lasted in all 66 minutes.

The fixtures for this evening are: Antonitch v. Dirk v. d. Berg; Bech-Olsen, Denmark, v. Romanoff; Schneider v. Petroff. Tomorrow there will be two performances: one in the afternoon at 3.30 p. m. at reduced prices, the other at the usual prices and at the usual hour in the evening. The names of the wrestlers tomorrow will be announced, if known, in our next number.

Alberich	Herr Kiess.
Brünnhilde	Frau Wittich.
Gutrune	Fräul. Seebe.

Norns	Fräul. Keldorfer.

PLOT. The Norns are discovered alone weaving the fate of the world. When the cord breaks they fly, as the dawn of another world is upon them. Siegfried, wishing to accomplish great deeds, takes farewell of Brünnhilde, entrusting her with the Ring. In the hall of the Gibichungs on the Rhine, Hagen, son of Alberich, is scheming to regain the Ring. He suggests to his half brother Gunther to give Siegfried a draught which will make him forget Brünnhilde (of whose existence Gunther is ignorant), and set him free to marry Gutrune, Gunther's sister. All turns out as Hagen wishes: Siegfried arrives, drinks the potion and promises to win Brünnhilde for Gunther. Waltraute, the Walkyrie, implores Brünnhilde to restore the Ring to the Rhine-maidens, to save Wotan and Walhalla. Brünnhilde refuses and soon after, Siegfried arrives in Gunther's shape, snatches the Ring, and after keeping vigil all night with his sword between him and her, leads her away to Gunther. Alberich appears to Hagen and urges him to kill Siegfried. Siegfried comes back and is welcomed by all, but Brünnhilde recognizes the Ring on his finger, and accuses him of having betrayed his friend Gunther by offering her violence. Brünnhilde discloses to Hagen that Siegfried has one vulnerable spot, namely in the back. The Rhine-maidens in vain ask Siegfried for the Ring. When resting from hunting, Hagen brings back Siegfried's memory by another potion. Siegfried tells the story of his life. Hagen kills him. The body is brought to Gunther's hall where Hagen quarrels with Gunther and kills him. Siegfried's body is placed on a pyre, onto which, when it is lighted, Brünnhilde, after singing a farewell to her dead lover, and proclaiming the end of the old regime and the dawn of a new world ruled by Love, leaps upon the pyre to perish with her dead lover. The Rhine overflows its banks, washes the pyre away and the Rhine-maidens snatch the Ring. Hagen rushes into the Rhine to get the Ring and is drowned. Walhalla is seen enveloped in flames.

HORSESHOE TRIBUTE.

Royalty and peers passing through Oakham are (the Times says) expected to pay toll to the lord of the manor in the shape of a horseshoe. The latest addition to the collection of horseshoes at Oakham Castle has just been fixed, and bears the inscription "Bernard Lord Coleridge, 1907." Lord Coleridge, in charging the grand jury at the last Assize Court there, said he feared he should have to pay the penalty, as not even judges were exempt. The late Lord Coleridge presented a shoe in 1879.
