THE AMERICAN PANIC.

The nervousness of the American public during the past week has not yet had time to react on the investing public in England and elsewhere, but there can be no question that only the promptest remedies courageously applied will prevent the uneasiness from spreading to European markets. The Knickerbocker Trust Company which is the second largest trust company in New York, with deposits of over sixty million dollars, was forced to suspend payment after having paid out eight million dollars. Whether or not the Company is still solvent is a matter of dispute; nor is the solvency of the Trust Company of America established with certainty. In addition, a number of companies identified with the Westinghouse interests have collapsed, while the Pittsburg Stock Exchange has been closed. All these circumstances have led to an enormous run on the trust companies which is by no means reassuring to those who have something to fear from the spread of the investors' distrust, but which has afforded to outside spectators the picturesque spectacle of an anxious public clamouring for its "dough" before the marble-fronted palaces where trust companies are wont to lodge. The situation is not, however, without its hopeful features and certainly not without its moral.

The panic has been very distinctly the outcome of recent developments on the American stock market, and though the connection between Trust magnates and a Trust company, which is in the main a legal depository for moneys paid into court and a financial agency or banking institution, is by no means direct, it is to the action of a small group of reckless speculators that much of the mischief is to be attributed. Though a substantial cause, this is not the only cause. There has been during the past six months a considerable falling off in the price of every kind of stock; as a consequence the conservative banks called in their loans, and many securities were immediately thrown on the market at any price they would fetch. Not only has confidence been destroyed, but the solvency of a number of important banks has been menaced, and in some cases actually affected; and, after all, even a solvent bank cannot with the most heroic efforts liquidate its assets within a single day, and without outside assistance.

Every step that can be taken to restore confidence and order is necessarily part of the duty of the American Government. Mr. Cortelyou, Secretary of the Treasury, has announced that Government deposits to the value of six million dollars are to be distributed among the leading National Banks in New York City, and it is reported on good authority that an additional fifteen million dollars will be forthcoming from the same source. "The Treasury Department," says Mr. Cortelyou, "will use its facilities to assist, in every proper way, legitimate business interests, and its action will be prompt and thorough": we may reasonably infer that the direct attack on legitimate interests will not on that account be shirked. At Nashville Mr. Roosevelt indeed expressed himself with quite characteristic vigour. He repudiated the charge that his legislative and executive policy had been responsible for the crisis. He declared that it represented an effort to punish successful dishonesty. "I doubt," he said, "if my policy has had any material effect in bringing about the present trouble; but if it has, that will not alter in the slightest degree my determination that during the next sixteen months of my term of office that policy shall be persevered in unswervingly. . . . All I did was to turn on the light. I am responsible for turning on the light, but not for what the light showed". The combination of material assistance with moral disapproval is original and attractive; for its effectiveness we have, however, no positive security. The Government might certainly do a great deal, but a combination of reputable financiers could do much more. The consultations held between such men as Mr. Harriman, Mr. Oakleigh Thorne and Mr. Ryan have already prevented a panic on the New York Stock Exchange, and must continue to prove reassuring. The work of the Government itself lies more in the direction of the drastic remedies which are to destroy the possibility of over-speculation in imaginary values.

BRITISH RULE IN CENTRAL AFRICA.

There are several items of interest in the annual report of the British Central Africa Protectorate just issued by the Colonial Office. With regard to the improved condition of the natives under British rule, we are told that the "craving for education" has developed in remarkable fashion. It is no uncommon sight in the larger European settlements to see adult labourers running to the mission schools with slates and books under their arms, and they will "spend hours of their spare time in repeating their spelling lessons at the top of their voices." Local markets are now flourishing, the recruitment for the Transvaal is under strict supervision and the people as a whole are prospering. On the other hand the Commissioner complains of the geographically incorrect name of the country, which causes absurd postal errors. Two of these blunders, however, were perpetrated by firms in Fleet-street "who might reasonably be supposed to have been in possession of up-to-date works of reference."

BRITISH TERRITORIAL ARMY.

INAUGURATION BY THE KING.

His Majesty King Edward inaugurated Mr. Haldane's Territorial Army scheme by receiving at Buckingham Palace on Saturday the Lords Lieutenant of the various counties who, under the scheme, will be at the head of the respective county associations having control of the local forces. A correspondent of the Globe says that the reception was a most imposing ceremony. The Royal Marshalsmen were on duty at the Grand Entrance to the Palace, and the King and those in attendance upon him were in full uniform.

His Majesty wore Field Marshal's dress, as also did the Duke of Connaught. Mr. Haldane was present in Levée dress.

The Lords Lieutenant were received at the Grand Entrance, and conducted to one of the State Apartments, where, at one o'clock, His Majesty received them.

His Majesty delivered a brief address to the assembled Lords Lieutenant, in the course of which it is understood he earnestly commended the territorial scheme to their care, and pointed out that they, as his county officers, would be largely responsible for the working of it.

The King, in addressing the Lords Lieutenant, delivered the following speech:—"My Lords and Gentlemen,—I have summoned you, the Lieutenants of England, Scotland, and Wales, to acquaint you with the new duties and responsibilities which will now devolve upon you. I gave my consent by a statute on the 2nd August for the formation of a new Territorial Army, and the success which will, I trust, result will mainly depend upon your efforts. Henceforth, my Yeomanry and my Volunteers are to form the Territorial Army, over the destinies of which you and your County Associations are to watch. To you are now delegated the duties of raising, equipping, and maintaining that portion of this force—the Imperial Army of the second line which lies within the shores of this Kingdom. The command and training of this force will be entrusted to the Generals in the commands, and to Generals and other officers serving under them, so that the force may enjoy in the fullest degree, in common with the regular Army, those advantages which accrue from being instructed in the highest and most developed school of military thought. It is further intended that the Territorial Army should receive the complete military organisation without which no army is competent to take the field. To accomplish this much will have to be done, changes will have to be made in some corps which at present exist, and other corps which do not at present exist will have to be created. In the performance of this difficult task I have instructed the military authorities to render all the help that it is in their power to give, but the ultimate success must depend upon the goodwill and public spirit of my loyal subjects, inspired and guided by you and your County Associations. Your duties will not be confined to raising in your counties the forces which the military authorities may require of you under the scheme which will hereafter be communicated to your associations. You will be required to hand over the forces to the military authorities in a fit condition to take the field, whether for training or for war. It will also rest with you to provide and maintain rifle ranges, drill halls, and such accommodation as is necessary for the safe custody of arms and equipment. Funds will be placed at your disposal by the Army Council for this and similar purposes. I look to you, my lords and gentlemen, through the instrumentality of your associations, to protect the interests of the Reservists and old soldiers who have worthily served their country in all parts of the world, and I ask you to enlist the sympathies of the owners and cultivators of the soil to facilitate the provision of areas for the training of my troops. My lords and gentlemen, the important duties and responsibilities which were formerly yours are being restored to you, and when you return hence to undertake this great and honourable task, I look to you to foster and direct by your precept and example the spirit of patriotic and voluntary effort which has for so long distinguished my loyal subjects. I hope that you will call to your aid all men who have at heart the interests of their country, and with a generous emulation will stimulate the efforts which you will make in your several counties. I have called you here today in order to express to you my confidence that you will employ your best endeavours to carry out the work with which you are entrusted. I have faith that the united efforts of my people will enable you to achieve success" (applause).

The Duke of Norfolk, at the close of His Majesty's speech, promised on behalf of those present to carry out the scheme to the best of their ability.

The assembled company, numbering nearly one hundred, then proceeded to the State dining-room, where luncheon was served, His Majesty and the members of his suite sitting down with the guests.

Among the Lords Lieutenant who attracted particular attention on their way to the Palace were the Dukes of Norfolk, Portland, and Fife, Lord Rothschild, Lord Elibank (accompanied by the Master of Elibank), Earl Spencer, Lord Lansdowne, Earl Clarendon, and the Earl of Warwick.

In attendance on the King were Lord Colebrooke, Sir Condie Stephen, and the Equerries in Waiting.

NEWS FROM AMERICA.

THE FINANCIAL CRISIS.—HOPEFUL FEELING PREVAILS.

New York, October 26.

Yesterday's feeling of hopefulness, that the situation was gradually clearing, did not diminish in the evening, and prominent financial men worn out by the ceaseless exertions of the past few days retired early, and no statements were issued.

All the morning papers display bold headlines such as "Stocks Up", "Runs Withstood", "Money Centre Quiets Down", "Bankers Calm", "Sky Clearing".

The World prints extracts translated into various languages from statements by Messrs. Morgan, Rockefeller, and Harriman, reassuring depositors and advising them not to withdraw their savings.—Reuter.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT CONGRATULATES MR. CORTELYOU.

President Roosevelt has addressed a letter to the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Cortelyou, conveying his congratulations on the admirable measures taken by the Secretary to combat the financial crisis. His congratulations were further extended to those men of business who had acted during the crisis with such practical sense and in such a public spirit. He added that the panic had been caused by speculation; quiet thought on the situation must adduce regained confidence in condition of American commerce.

THE EARTHQUAKES IN ITALY.

Reggio, October 26.

It is further reported from the district affected by the earthquake, that the villages Pioppo, Chiesa, and Zoparto are entirely in ruins. Half of Brancalene, a few houses in Bovelino, the tower and several of the public buildings in Gerace, and the tower of Portigliola have collapsed. Two people were hurt by a stone which fell in the street. In Bianconovo two people were killed and 24 injured, 8 of these seriously. Injuries are also reported from a number of other places.

Rome, October 26.

Traffic in the district affected by the earthquake is rendered very difficult by the torrential rain that has fallen. Minister Lacava and Cardinal Portanova, who wished to go to Ferruzzano could not reach their destination owing to the storm and the inundations. The train in which the Minister was travelling was kept waiting 7 hours. The rescue operations in Brancalene are being directed by General Alijerindi.

Brancaleone, October 27.

A new earthquake occurred at noon today, terrifying the people but doing no damage.

THE SYMPATHY OF OTHER STATES.

Rome, October 27.

The Imperial Chancellor Prince Bülow has sent a telegraphic message to the Minister of Foreign Affairs, Signor Tittoni, expressing his hearty sympathy in the sad calamity which has occurred in Calabria. The Austrian Ambassador paid a visit to Signor Tittoni and conveyed to him the sympathy of the Austro-Hungarian Government. The Commander-in-Chief of the British Mediterranean Fleet has offered, through the British Embassy at Rome, to send a ship to give assistance. The Swedish, Greek, and Argentine Governments have also demonstrated their sympathy.

It is reported from Tangier that the Banque de Paris et des Pays-Bas in conjunction with other banks has loaned the Sultan the sum of 60,000 pounds sterling. The fact will be communicated to the Maghzen today.

Casablanca, October 26.

Moorish horsemen are seen in great numbers on the surrounding heights. The Arabians have stopped returning to the town. The presence of the Moors indicates that Mulay Reschid's Mahalla has not left the neighbourhood. The authorities doubt the report that a French cruiser bombarded Mogador.

Tangier, October 27.

Mulai Hafid, who learned that Sultan Abdul Asiz had sent soldiers to Mogador, ordered reinforcements for his Mahalla, which is on its way to Mogador under the command of Mulai Zaafer. He nominated Kaid Sabib Bacha governor of Mogador and sent him also thither. Mulai Hafid sent 4,000 Louisdors to Bend Bid, the commander of the Sultan Abdul Asiz' troops in Mogador, to persuade him to join his Mahalla and allow it to enter Mogador. As a further bribe he offered him the post of commander-in-chief.

DRESDEN: LOCAL.

Concerts. Dr. Ludwig Wüllner, who in his song recitals so incomparably and with the most intelligent and vivid accentuation strikes the true note of a ballad, gave us chiefly lyrics, vocal lyrics, in the first of the two concerts which we are to have from him this winter; and many of the very numerous audience may well have been specially glad to hear—from Wüllner, the master of full and forcible expression—Schubert's song-cycle "Die schöne Müllerin". But alas! disappointment began to be felt when Dr. Wüllner had sung the first number of the cycle. The florid melody of Schubert's muse cannot at all bear the sharply pointed accentuation in which the rhetorical and declamatory genius of Wüllner delights. All that velvety softness and the deep tenderness with which the gliding cantilene of these wonderful songs should appeal to us were in consequence lost; not that they require a powerful voice or one that is merely sweet, but rather and above all perfect vocal art. And that is just what this gifted singer does not possess. He has never learnt to "spin" tone to perfection or to pass from one register to another, to breathe out a resonant piano, to make his soft notes vibrate and lightly hover—that is denied to his rough dry voice. And so his special talent fails to suit these Schubert songs. Only when Dr. Wüllner could give vent to outbursts of pathetic passion—as in "Feierabend" or "Ungeduld"—where he could declaim with glowing fervour, there he kindled the enthusiasm of his hearers. The applause of the public was in proportion to the singer's display of energetic feeling in his tone-delivery. Dr. Wüllner should take note of that fact and draw from it the lesson that, with all his genius, he cannot accomplish everything.

The gifted accompanist, Herr Coenrad V. Bos, showed himself under all circumstances consistently perfect; even when the singer was disappointing, the accompaniment was delightful, and so the impression of the concert as a whole was not lost.

Herren Bachmann, Bärtich, and Stenz attracted a large audience to the Neustadt Casino on the same evening as the above concert (Saturday), to hear a performance of masterpieces of chamber music literature of the romantic school, viz. the pianoforte trios: in G op. 112 of J. Raff; in B-flat minor op. 5. of Volkmann; and in G-minor op. 110 of Schumann. However absolutely sure the art of these gentlemen is, however brilliant and animated their rhythm, however pearly and smooth their figure-work, they did not develop that luxuriantly rich tone, that melting magic, that mysterious fragrance which the blue flower of Romance should exhale; there was wanting, in spite of all exactness, the gush of tone-feeling that in particular the Schumann work requires. But nevertheless the public thanked the favourite artists with the warmth of applause which their distinguished performances always evoke. Her Royal Highness Princess Mathilde was present at the Concert and remained to the end.—M. N.

The chambermusic-evening given by the Misses Klara Bräuer (piano), Julie Stummer (violin) and Eugenie Stoltz (cello) takes place on Wednesday the 30th inst. at seven o'clock in the Palmengarten. The programme is as follows: A. Arensky: trio No. 2 in F-minor op. 73; Grieg: sonata A-minor op. 36 for piano and 'cello; Chevillard: trio in F op. 3.

The guards in the city today are furnished by the 1st Grenadier Regiment No. 100. The band plays in the Neustadt about 12.30 p. m.

PLOT. Adele, Rosalind's maid, is invited by her sister Ida to an entertainment given by a Russian Prince Orlofsky; but Rosalind will not let her go. Rosalind's husband, Eisenstein, has been given a sentence of five days imprisonment, which, owing to the stupidity of his lawyer, Blind, has been increased to 8 days. Eisenstein turns Blind out of the house. Rosalind has promised a lover, Alfred, whose tenor voice she loves, to admit him after her husband has gone; so when Eisenstein goes with a friend, Falk, to the Russian prince's entertainment, after which he is to go to jail, she lets Adele go, and admits Alfred, but is disturbed by Frank, the governor of the prison. She passes Alfred off as her husband and he is taken to prison. Adele creates a sensation at Orlofsky's ball, and though Eisenstein recognises her, no one believes him when he says she is a servant. Rosalind also appears masked, and Eisenstein flirts violently with her, she taking possession of his watch. At supper Eisenstein relates how Falk, who had disguised himself for the occasion as a bat (Fledermaus) got intoxicated at a ball, and went to sleep in the street, when the crowd jeered him, calling him Dr. Fledermaus. Frank is also at the ball, masquerading as a Marquis, and gets very intoxicated, and on his return home finds the prison warden, Frosch, still more so. Adele and Ida come to ask the Marquis to smooth matters for Adele at the Eisenstein's; when a ring is heard, the girls are put in a cell: it is Eisenstein arriving to give himself up. Blind arrives to defend Alfred, the supposed Eisenstein, but the real Eisenstein turns him out, and putting on his gown and spectacles has Alfred fetched. Rosalind also arrives. Eisenstein reveals himself and mutual recriminations ensue, when Falk arrives with all the other guests and explains that the whole thing is a joke concocted by him to avenge the Fledermaus incident, and all pledge each other in champagne.

THE GOLDEN AGE.
 The golden age of the world has always lain in the boyhood of persons of fifty; and in 1950 our grandchildren will hear old men prattle of their youth in the vein of Lowell's "Cambridge Thirty Years Ago"; and tales of the Spartan severity of manners and morals of New York suburban towns, in the present year of grace, will entertain and edify the extravagant and graceless devotees of the flying machine.—Evening Post, New York.

LONDON LETTER.

(From our correspondent.)
London, October 26.

A RAILWAY MYSTERY.

The Board of Trade inquiry into the recent appalling railway disaster at Shrewsbury, and the inquest on the unfortunate victims, which was brought to a conclusion on Wednesday by a verdict of accidental death, have revealed some curious sidelights of the catastrophe. Among the numerous bodies taken from the débris was that of a young bank clerk named Kelly. He was discovered pinned beneath the twisted ironwork of the locomotive tender, and in such a position as to prove that he could not possibly have been thrown from one of the carriages. It appears practically certain, therefore, that he was an occupant of the engine cab at the time of the derailment, but no reason for his being there is known. This is a most astounding revelation, and it is quite within the bounds of possibility that there is some connexion between the mystery of his presence and the cause of the terrible disaster. A careful search of the body also reveals the fact that he did not possess a railway ticket, a circumstance which strongly bears out the theory as to his being actually on the footplate of the engine during the fatal journey. It is, of course, a most serious offence for a driver to harbour anybody in his cab excepting his fireman while on duty, but it is tolerably certain that Driver Martin was guilty of this misdemeanour. Quite naturally this disclosure has caused a great sensation, but while theories are plentiful, there is small likelihood of the real truth of the matter becoming known, since the three men who alone could have solved the problem, viz. the driver, the fireman, and Kelly himself are all numbered among the mutilated dead.

There is also another phase of the accident which will undoubtedly cause much disquiet to the travelling public. Examination into the record of Driver Martin, during the Board of Trade inquiry, elicited the information that the deceased man had, on two previous occasions, been guilty of running past signals set for danger, although no disastrous results followed. When it is remembered that the calamity at Grantham some months ago appears to have arisen from the momentary mental aberration of the driver, it is indubitably questionable whether the precautions taken by the railway authorities to ensure the perfect mental equilibrium of their drivers are sufficiently severe. There would appear to be no systematic or periodical examination of the men upon whose correctness of judgment depend the lives of millions of railway passengers, and this is a state of affairs demanding instant rectification. As an instance of the tragic possibilities resultant upon the sudden incapacity of the man at the throttle, it may be mentioned that a case occurred last week where a driver fell dead on the footplate of his engine just outside Leicester station, and had it not been for the coolness of the fireman, who was able to arrest the train, which was travelling at a high rate of speed, the probability is that we should have read of another horrifying wreck, the cause of which was wrapped in the usual mystery.

THE KAISER'S VISIT.

Preparations for the forthcoming Imperial visit to London are well in hand, and if one is to judge by the numerous decorative schemes which are being matured, the progress of their Majesties through the city of London will be marked by a universal and spontaneous welcome seldom accorded to even the most exalted guests. However much the man in the street may differ with certain phases of Germany's policy, he never ceases to admire the magnificent statesmanship and virility of the German Emperor, whose strong personality and revivifying influence stand unique in monarchical annals.

During the next month this country will have the honour of entertaining no less than three royal couples, as in addition to the visit of the German Emperor and Empress, the King and Queen of Norway and their Majesties of Spain are also expected to arrive in England very shortly. Under these circumstances, it is profoundly to be hoped that Jupiter Pluvius will condescend to restrain his ire, so that the visiting sovereigns may enjoy real "king's weather" during their sojourn among us. At all events, it would appear unlikely that the rain deity's reserve can be in anything but a depleted condition after his prodigal outpourings of the present year. Unfortunately, however lavish his disbursements, he does not appear to become bankrupt, probably owing to the unstinted "watering of his stock."

THE "MAURETANIA".

The new Cunard leviathan reached Liverpool on Thursday morning, having on board many distinguished passengers who had been invited to accompany the vessel on her trip from Newcastle. All on board speak with enthusiasm of the "Mauretania's" qualities, and it is confidently asserted that she will easily outstrip her sister greyhound when she is actually allowed to show her mettle. Up to the present, strict secrecy enveils the results of her trials over the measured mile, but unofficial reports credit her with attaining a speed of well over 26 knots. In any case, it is practically certain that her speed capabilities are much in excess of the contract requirements. The huge vessel is to enter graving dock at Liverpool in order to have her hull painted. From there she proceeds to the Clyde to undergo her official trials, so that her maiden trip to New York is expected to take place about the beginning of December. Although at that period of the year heavy passenger lists are quite unusual, there is every reason to suppose that this latest masterpiece of marine architecture will have even her enormous accommodation taxed to the utmost limit.

In this hour of triumph, however, there is the usual fly in the ointment, the ubiquitous insect being furnished, on this occasion, by Dr. Wiegand of the North German Lloyd Company. He makes out an admirable case against modern tendency to phenomenal speed in Transatlantic liners, as he cleverly argues that increased steaming power confers no advantage if the vessel reaches New York during the night. This is an entirely logical conclusion, but if 26 knots represents anything like the "Mauretania's" normal speed, it should not be a matter of difficulty to so regulate her runs as to ensure her arrival in the North River at an hour not too late to disembark passengers. In any case, Dr. Wiegand's objection is quite trivial, and will certainly not abate the feverish endeavour to still further lower existing records in Transatlantic passages.

A PLEA FOR THE CENSOR.

Considerable sensation has been caused in theatrical circles by Mr. Arthur Bourchier's vigorous opposition to the proposed abolition of the present interpretation of the Censor's office. He is, however, only voicing prevailing public opinion when he asseverates that nothing is more calculated to bring the English stage into disrepute than such an alternative as police supervision. The truth of this statement is quite obvious, but the "Intellectuals" have suggested no practical system of dramatic surveillance in lieu of the existing authority they are so desirous of obliterating. Mr. Bourchier also administers a home thrust to the Shavian school by declaring that it is infinitely easier to construct a plot on forbidden subjects than it is to ring the changes on more conventional lines. We shall doubtless be edified by abstruse specimens of "intellectual" invective politely launched at the darling Mr. Bourchier for airing his candid sentiments. Nevertheless he has the majority at his back, a fact the apostles of "realism" would do well to recognize, if they have an eye to their future royalties.

THE FINANCIAL PANIC IN GOTHAM.

Up to the present, no appreciable effect upon the London money market has been produced by the financial frenzy now raging in New York. In fact, there is good reason to believe that various signs and portents for many months past have not been overlooked in the city, with the result that British commitments with the United States are on a considerably smaller scale than in previous years. Naturally enough, there has been a drop of several points in American stock, but anything like an actual crisis occurring in London, consequent upon the Wall Street disturbance, is altogether out of the range of probability. The most serious feature of the calamity, as experienced here, has been the perpetration by some punning miscreant of the following atrocity: What is the analogy between Pharaoh's daughter and the pavement brokers in Wall Street? Both parties drew a little profit from the rushes on the banks.

WINTER AND DEATH DUTIES.

"As the falling of leaves so is the passing of men." Winter is now upon us, and for the next five months the Chancellor of the Exchequer looks forward to a harvest of death duties. Already the will lists in the papers are growing daily longer and longer; at Christmas they will have reached their maximum length. It is sad, but, nevertheless, true, that the severer the winter the fuller the Treasury.
