NEWS FROM ENGLAND.

INTERESTING CEREMONY IN LONDON.

The inaugural ceremony of the German Seamen's Home in London took place on Wednesday in the presence of H. R. H. Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein. The occasion was marked by the conferment of different decorative orders, Freiherr v. Schröder, among others receiving the First Class of the Order of the Crown for his great services in connection with the founding of the Home.

GOVERNMENT CHANGES.

Mr. Asquith arrived at Biarritz late on Tuesday night, and was received by King Edward on the following morning. The Premier-designate is staying at the Hotel du Palais, where a suite of rooms had been engaged for him when his impending arrival became known. Official advices received in London on Wednesday stated that nothing was settled about the date of the right hon. gentleman's return, except that he was hardly likely to be back in England before Friday. It is Mr. Asquith's desire to return to London at the earliest possible moment, so as to proceed with his preparations for the business of the House of Commons when it resumes sittings after the Easter recess.

Mr. Lloyd George, President of the Board of Trade, was expected in Paris today or tomorrow in order to fulfil several engagements, but owing to the political crisis it is extremely probable that his visit will be cancelled.

It is understood that Mr. Lloyd George will be the new Chancellor of the Exchequer. Mr. Asquith's choice lay between Mr. John Morley and the President of the Board of Trade. Mr. Morley, however, does not feel inclined at the present moment to leave the India Office, where he is engaged in solving many interesting problems. Mr. Lloyd George's successor, it is believed, will be either the Under-Secretary for the Colonies or Mr. Harcourt. In the case of the former leaving the Colonial Office his successor in all probability will be Col. Seely, the member for the Abercrombie Division. The only member of the Ministry who is likely to retire is the Marquess of Ripon, who finds the responsibilities of office and the necessity for daily attendance at the House of Lords somewhat more than his advancing years can bear.

The Lobby correspondent of the Daily Telegraph remarks that by general consent Colonel Seely is to be the new Under-Secretary for the Colonies. In certain quarters it was suggested that Sir Thomas Whittaker might succeed Mr. Runciman as Secretary to the Treasury. It may be recalled, however, that the member for the Spen Valley, who has undoubted claims upon the Liberal party, was offered a post when Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman was forming his Government, but that he was prevented from accepting it by private considerations.

It is possible that Mr. Gladstone is destined for a peerage, and that Mr. Sinclair, the Secretary for Scotland, will in due course receive a Colonial appointment. No surprise would be felt if the Earl of Crewe, the most conspicuous success on the Ministerial side in the House of Lords, were to become a Secretary of State.

The by-election writs will be issued next Tuesday.

KING EDWARD SHARPLY CRITICISED.

Writing on the political crisis, says a London telegram, the Chronicle remarks that King Edward, if it had been in any way possible to him, would have done well to return to London. "There may be reasons of which we know nothing," adds this paper "but it looks, on the face of it, as if King Edward had made the first mistake of a reign hitherto uninterruptedly successful and popular."

TRANSLATION OF SWEDENBORG.

On Tuesday morning in the Swedish Church of St. George-in-the-East, London, the remains of Emmanuel Swedenborg were disinterred and placed in a new coffin ready for the voyage to Sweden. Among those present during the proceedings were the Swedish Minister (Count Wrangel), the officials of the Legation, Pastor Lindskog of the Swedish Lutheran Church, and the officer of the frigate "Fylgia," into whose charge the remains have been entrusted.

Since 1772 Swedenborg's body has remained in a vault under the Communion table, without disturbance, and the last time the vault was opened was in 1848. The first thing done was to remove the flagstones and open the vault. It was then seen that Swedenborg's coffin, with several others, rested on a bench. The lead shell was intact, but pieces of wood forming part of the old coffin were scattered about. When the shell was opened it was found that all that remained was Swedenborg's skull, a few bones, and a small quantity of whitish powder. The shell was closed again and placed in a large oak coffin with steel fittings and an inscription on a steel plate giving the name Emmanuel Swedenborg and the dates of his birth and death—1688 and 1772.

120,000 LIVE EELS FOR GERMANY.

The North German Lloyd liner "Kaiser Wilhelm II," which called at Plymouth this week, embarked for Bremen 12 cases, each containing 10,000 live eels, which will be shipped under the direction of Herr Lubbert, a German inspector of fisheries, for stocking German rivers. For some unknown reason there has been a falling off in the number of eels in German rivers, and in order to increase the supply numbers of young fish have been obtained from Ireland. Another consignment of about 100 cases is shortly to be sent. They will be first placed in the laboratory at Cuxhaven, and on attaining maturity will be turned into various streams.

ALARMING ACCIDENT IN A THEATRE.

During a Matinée at the Empire theatre, Croydon, on Tuesday, a woman fell from the gallery into the pit. Her fall was broken by two ladies upon whom she fell, but she received such injuries to her head that she had to be conveyed to hospital. The two ladies on whom she fell were also severely hurt. It is supposed that the woman, in her keen interest in the play, leaned over the front rail of the gallery and lost her balance. The accident caused great excitement in the theatre.

NEWS FROM AMERICA.

THE UNEMPLOYED IN CHICAGO.

Five hundred men out of work, who had spent the night in the open air, collected in front of the City Hall in Chicago on Wednesday morning and said they were determined to stop there until they got either work or bread, or starved to death. The police, fearing that trouble might ensue, drew their truncheons and dispersed the men; the authorities afterwards caused food to be served out to them.

BOMB MAKER'S CONFESSION.

The man Silverstein, the author of the bomb outrage at an unemployed workmen's demonstration in Union-square, New York, last Saturday week, has confessed to the police that he constructed the infernal machine out of one of the brass balls which were screwed on to the posts of his bedstead. The cause of the premature ignition of the fuse was the dropping of a lighted cigarette upon it. Silverstein, who is lying in a New York hospital, presents a pitiable spectacle, but will probably now recover.

The Kaiser has just sent to President Roosevelt an enormous book, for which it is claimed that it is the biggest volume ever printed. The dimensions of the book are 2.80 metres in height, 1.50 metres in width, 90 centimetres in thickness, or, in English equivalents, it is about 9 ft. by 4 1/2 ft. by 3 ft. It is enriched by numerous illustrations representing landscapes and scenes from German life selected by the Kaiser. The book is, in fact, an encyclopaedia of Germany.

From the dimensions given it will be assumed that the volume is not easily portable, and it may be added that it required a horse and cart to convey it from the steamer to the White House, where it is to be placed in the Congressional Library. We have called it a German encyclopaedia, because, strange to say, the Kaiser, by not giving it a title, has left a wide field for nomenclature. That the volume is handsomely bound goes without saying. It bears an inscription recording that the work is the gift of the Emperor William and the German nation to President Roosevelt and the people of the United States.

Fatal Bridge Accident. Yesterday morning after the official testing of the bridge at the Humboldt-hafen, seven workmen, who had stepped on to a plank gangway that was not strong enough to bear them, were thrown into the water, and two of the number, Paul Flöter and Hermann Stein, were drowned.

As a detachment of the fire-brigade were engaged in extinguishing a fire that broke out shortly before 8 o'clock yesterday morning in the fourth storey of the Elite Hotel, on the Reichstagsufer, some of the men standing on the main staircase were precipitated to the basement by the sudden collapse of part of the stairs. A foreman and two men were severely injured and burned, and one of them shortly afterwards succumbed to his injuries.

On Wednesday last, owing to some cause as yet unexplained a man named Katarzynski the Portier of the house Fasanen Strasse No. 72, and his wife, fell through the open door of the elevator shaft on the third floor to the bottom, and were killed on the spot.

GENERAL NEWS.

SHOCKING POLICE SCANDALS IN PHILADELPHIA.

A contemporary reports from New York that a condition bordering on panic prevails in Philadelphia since it has transpired that the city's police force is implicated in the burglaries which have, so to speak, assumed the proportions of an epidemic during the past few weeks. Four policemen have already been taken into custody. In the residence of one officer a large quantity of stolen property was found; another one confessed his complicity and declared that the entire police force of Philadelphia was permeated with a criminal element. In his precinct fifty per cent of the policemen were robbers, and the other precincts were no better. One of the city officials states that many officers will be sent up for trial. Three have already been suspended.

THE GOULD-SAGAN ROMANCE.

According to latest reports from New York the Gould family have abandoned their opposition to the engagement of Mme. Anna Gould with the Prince of Sagan. The reconciliation took place at a dinner given by the Gould family early this week, and the public announcement of the betrothal is expected to follow shortly.

MR. PIERPONT MORGAN.

We hear from Rome that the newspaper reports to the effect that the American financier, Mr. Pierpont Morgan, is lying seriously ill in the Italian capital are absolutely unfounded. On the contrary, Mr. Morgan is at present enjoying the best of health.

NEWS FROM FRANCE.

MADAME ZOLA AND HER HUSBAND'S ASHES.

In a letter to M. Ranc, member of the Senate, published by the Paris journal Aurore, Mme. Zola regrets that her husband's remains are to be disturbed, and she expresses the conviction that his labours of forty years, his attitude at the time of the Dreyfus case, and the insults of the Nationalists will be a more fitting monument than a resting-place in the Panthéon. Mme. Zola adds that she is most grateful to all those who wish to pay a tribute to her husband's memory, but she does not think that any special mark of recognition is required.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT A WEDDING.

As a wedding feast was being held in a barn in the village of Mortiers, near Poitiers, the roof fell in and two of the guests were killed. Many others of the large number of people present were badly hurt.

SACRILEGIOUS RIOT IN ITALY.

In the small town of Troja, in the province of Foggia, South Italy, the population had fallen out with the Bishop. As the clergy were holding Mass on Tuesday, a mob of about 1,000 persons rushed into the cathedral, drove away the priests, and destroyed the Bishop's chair. Not content with that outrage, the mob tried to set fire to the building, though their efforts in this direction seem to have failed. They then proceeded to the episcopal palace, tore down the Bishop's armorial bearings, smashed all the windows, and endeavoured to force their way into the premises. By this time, however, a battalion of infantry had arrived on the scene, and the rioters dispersed.

THE ELECTION DISTURBANCES IN LISBON.

Tuesday night is reported to have passed quietly except for one murderous outrage aimed at the military. As two soldiers in plain clothes were patrolling in front of the house occupied by the Commandant of a squadron of the Town Guard in the neighbourhood of the barracks, revolver shots were heard and the two men fell. Some policemen who were soon on the spot found one of the men dead and the other dying, and saw several people running away a short distance off. Of the victims of the outrage in the Church of St. Dominic on Sunday last, two have died of their injuries. The Patriarch of Lisbon has prohibited the performance of divine service in the church of St. Dominic and in the Alcantara church.

Wednesday passed quietly. The murder of the two soldiers is now said to have been an act of personal vengeance perpetrated by men who were formerly in the Municipal Guard. The police have arrested the leader of the demonstrators who are charged with having forcibly entered the closed guard-rooms of the Municipal Guard.

THE CAMPANILE AT VENICE.

The work of restoring the famous Campanile of Venice is proceeding with the greatest activity, now that the foundations have been completed. The scaffolding is of the most elaborate character, and so arranged that it can be automatically raised en bloc as the work proceeds. It has a covering, so that the men can work in all weathers. An electric lift fixed inside the tower serves to raise the materials required. The Campanile, which is to have a height of 100 metres when finished, is at present 17 metres high, and at the estimated progress of 3 metres a month, will be completed before the end of 1910.

A DOOMED LANDMARK.

The block of old buildings known as No. 1, Brick-court, Middle Temple, will shortly be pulled down in consequence of their unsafe condition, and the tenants of the various chambers will, says the Law Times, vacate their rooms by the end of the present month. The work of rebuilding the chambers will be carried on with all speed. The building is one of the oldest in the Temple, and it may be mentioned that it was in Brick-court that Goldsmith sometime lived.

BELGIAN ENTERPRISE.

Statistics just published show that Belgium will not be left behind, if she can help it, in the race for commerce.—During 1905 she established in France 175 business houses, 152 in Russia, 63 in Germany, and 170 in Spain, Italy, and in the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg. So much for Europe. In America the same enterprise is seen, 107 agencies being set up in the United States, 45 in Argentina, and 20 in Brazil. Africa's share is 48 establishments in the Congo, 15 in Egypt, and 15 in Algiers and Tunis. To these must be added 29 houses in Asia, 24 being in China, 12 in Oceania, and 7 in Australia.

DRESDEN

In commemoration of H. M. King Friedrich August's entrance into active military service with the First Grenadier Regiment No. 100, festivities have been arranged for tomorrow, April 11, with the consent of His Majesty. At 11.30 a. m. a parade will be held in the barrack yard; following which the men of the old First Company and Verein delegates will dine. At 5.30 p. m. a dinner will take place in the officers' mess, and at 7.30 the celebration of the occasion by the First Company—the one which the King joined 25 years ago—will commence at the Waldschlösschen.

H. M. the King has been pleased to confer decorative Orders on the captain and several of the officers and crew of the North German Lloyd S. S. "Grosser Kurfürst", the vessel on which His Majesty voyaged from Genoa to Antwerp last week.

The American Consul-General, T. St. John Gaffney, Esq., and Mrs. Gaffney, have returned to Dresden, via Berlin, after a visit to the American diplomatic representatives at Copenhagen, The Hague and Brussels.

Deputy Consul-General U. J. Bywater left yesterday evening for England, accompanied by his father, Capt. P. D. Bywater.

The firm F. Olivier was honoured yesterday by a visit from His Royal Highness the Grand Duke of Oldenburg, who made a number of purchases.

The sale of tickets for the concert at the Royal Opera House on Palm Sunday commences tomorrow. The tickets for the final rehearsal may be obtained today at the Royal Opera box office at the usual hours.

At the Central Theatre today and tomorrow Der Mann mit den 3 Frauen, an operetta in 3 Acts by Julius Bauer, music by Franz Lehár, will be given for the 7th and 8th time respectively.

The performance of Der Mann mit den 3 Frauen has to be discontinued during Holy Week, and the programme for the week, as now fixed, will be as follows. On Sunday, the 12th instant, at 3.30, Der fidele Bauer, an operetta in 1 Prologue and 2 Acts by Victor Léon, music by Leo Fall, will be given at half-prices; at 7.30 p. m. the 25th performance of Die Dollarprinzessin, an operetta in 3 Acts by Willner and Grünbaum, music by Leo Fall, will take place, at prices on the usual evening scale. On Monday evening Der Pfarrer von Kirchfeld, on Tuesday evening Sherlock Holmes, and on Wednesday evening Der Pfarrer von Kirchfeld, will be repeated. From Thursday till Saturday inclusive the theatre will be closed.

At the Tonkünstler Verein on Wednesday evening a Suite for piano and 'cello by Emil Kronke was played, as a novelty. It is a smooth, agreeable work, containing all the mannerisms of good salon music without thought of any significance. In the excellent rendering of this piece the composer was ably assisted by Konzertmeister Wille. Of far greater value were the "Variationen über ein eigenes Thema," for four 'celli, by Julius Klengel. These are not novelties to Dresdeners, as they were played last year at the Vincentius Verein concert; but thanks are due to the Tonkünstler Verein for their revival, as these are not only the most original but perhaps the very best which have so far been presented to us by the famous Leipzig 'cellist. Herren Wille, Nusser, Wohlrab and v. Schuch (Herr Ernst v. Schuch's youngest son), the same quartet which played these Variations last year, again rendered them with beautiful tone, displaying a dexterity truly marvellous in their struggle with the manifold technicalities of this work. But the most powerful impression of the evening was received from the Concerto in C for three pianos and string orchestra, by Bach, a work which is but seldom heard. The wonderful delicacy of this Concerto, playfully coupled as it is with great power, was magnificently emphasised by the exquisite rendering which it received at the hands of Herren Scholtz, Sherwood and Bachmann. Their playing was superb, and Herr Hagen, conducting the orchestra, rose to an equal height with the gifted artists. Mozart's Quintet in A is not the most valuable legacy which the Salzburg master left us: it is very dependent upon the spirit of Haydn and only exhibits beauty of so-called "immortality" in the last two movements. Herren Lange (clarinet), Lange-Frohberg and Warwas (violin), Spitzner (viola) and Böckmann ('cello), however, devoted all their mature art to the rendering, so that a hearty reception was secured.

The concert was honoured with the presence of T. R. H. the Princesses Johann Georg and Mathilde. M. N.

Herr Rudolph Zabel, the author, whose chief residence is in Oberlössnitz near Dresden, started a few days ago from Frankfort on the Main on a scientific expedition to India, by automobile. There were two automobiles, the first carrying Herr and Frau Zabel, a scientific collaborator, and the chauffeur, the second following with the luggage and instruments. Both cars were specially constructed for the journey. Shortly after the trip had commenced the steering gear of the first automobile became defective and the car collided with a tree, the occupants being thrown out. Frau Zabel sustained a fracture of the chin bone, while the chauffeur broke his arm. The first reports of this mishap led one to believe the automobile was so badly damaged that the idea of continuing the trip had been given up. Extensive damage to his car is, however, now denied by the intrepid Herr Zabel, who at the same time announces that far from abandoning the long trip a fresh start will be made from Frankfort on Wednesday next. The party will again include Frau Zabel, who insists upon going with her husband.

The programme of tomorrow evening's Symphony Concert at the Gewerbehaus, the last of these symphony concerts for this season, will contain the works of German composers only, as under. (1) Overture "Der Flüchtling," E. Kretschmer. (2) Concerto for Violoncello, Haydn (Herr P. Moth). (3) Suite for orchestra, from the opera "Frauenlob," R. Becker. (4) Three movements of Beethoven's IX. Symphony (repeated by request). (5) "Die Toteninsel," Symphonic Poem, Schulz-Beuthen. (6) Festmarsch, Draeseke.

The gigantic gilt figure, which is intended to crown the summit of the new Rathaus, was conveyed to the foot of the tower last Wednesday, and is now to be hoisted to the top. It will take several days to get this massive figure to the required altitude, but it is expected to be in position on Thursday next.

The guards in the city today are furnished by the Schützen Regiment No. 108. The band plays about 12.40 p. m. at the Schloss Platz.

THE AMERICAN CHURCH OF ST. JOHN, Reichs Platz 5, at the head of Reichs Strasse.

VI.

Some thirty years ago a grievous blow fell upon a numerous and prosperous community, viz. the Ceylon coffee planters. But a short time before, to be precise, in 1875, the boom in the coffee trade was at its height and fortunes were being rapidly made in the Island, but the coffee planters were over rapacious, they neglected to put back into the soil an equivalent for what they were taking out of it, while over-production occasioned the inevitable reaction in prices. Bad times seemed looming ahead, but there was no thought of the disaster which was imminent. A mysterious fungus blight, the Hemitea vastatrix, made its appearance and spread with incredible rapidity throughout the plantations; steps to deal with it were not taken in time, and by 1880 the coffee industry was completely paralysed, a state of things which spelt ruin to many a planter. With commendable pluck they faced the inevitable and even began to retrieve their fortunes by planting cinchona, the source of alkaloid quinine, but again over-production lowered prices and it was then that experiments were made showing that the future of Ceylon lay in the production of another breakfast table necessity, viz. tea, with the result that nowadays the large majority of English settlers in the island are devoting all their efforts to growing tea, no less than 400,000 acres being covered with the profitable little bush.

A timely invitation from an old friend afforded the writer a welcome opportunity to visit a tea-plantation and, at the same time, gave a chance of seeing up-country scenery which differs so entirely from that by now so familiar, in the tropical lowlands.

Leaving Kandy in the full glare of a midday sun I soon found the train was climbing steadily, and it was not long before, at an elevation of 2,500ft, the characteristic tropical scenery began to disappear, cocoa-nut palms or bamboos ceased and in their stead were noticed tea fields, for the most part dotted with the feathery grevillia, or Australian silky oak, grown partly for the sake of firewood partly for the chequered shade it affords the tea plantations. Climbing ever higher and higher the line—a wonderful engineering feat by the way, passing as it does through no fewer than 40 tunnels—reaches a country of great rolling downs crowned for the most part with virgin jungle. Far down below is a vast undulating valley, an occasional silvery gleam denoting the presence of the rice fields now under water. At length, after an eight hours' climb, we reach the station of Haputale at a height of 5,000ft. Smart liveried ricksha coolies are in waiting and I am soon whirling away up the couple of miles of well-made road which leads to the planter's bungalow. Arrived there one is struck at once by a very paradise of a garden. The high elevation enables flowers of the temperate zone to flourish exceedingly. Roses of many varieties, flaming cannas, gaudy nasturtiums, convolvuli, clematis, jasmine and countless other home favourites are there, cheek by jowl with brilliant crotons, a giant bougainvillea, coleus, the latter's crimson foliage forming an admirable foil to the white madonna lilies and other tropical plants, and the whole shaded by fine specimens of jungle trees interspersed with flowering aloes and silver eucalyptus.

Our talk is, naturally enough, of tea, tea, tea, and next morning, when the keen air and bright sun reminded one of our English summer day at its best, we had ample leisure to witness tea-manufacture ab ovo. The whole hillside up to the jungle edge is covered with the dwarf bushes, with their glistening pointed leaves, of the tea plant. At one part of the estate were numerous coolies, for the most part women, a deep basket slung on their backs. With a celerity gained by practise these coolies were plucking the three top-most leaves of the young shoots on the squat bushes, and pitching them into their baskets. At midday a halt was called, and all the leaves thus plucked were weighed and sent down to the factory; then plucking was recommenced, to continue till 4 o'clock when work ceases for the day.

The factory, a lofty brick building, stands well below the bungalow, and here the whole process of tea making is carried out. It is remarkable for its simplicity. The gathered leaf is first spread on jute hessian mats or "tats" as they are called, where by next morning it is sufficiently withered to be put into a rolling machine which has the effect of crumpling and twisting the leaves, so that they hang together in masses. They are then broken up in a machine called a roll-breaker and then spread on asphalt where, in a couple of hours or so, oxidation has set in and the leaf has assumed a coppery hue. The leaf is then "fired", i. e. passed through a machine through which currents of hot air at a temperature of 150 F. are forced, after which process it is tea as we know it. All that is then required is sifting into various grades of fineness, and then it is packed in tin-lined cases ready for transportation to the coast.

Paris, April 9. According to a telegram from General Liauthey, the Shereef Buz-zani with 1,500 mounted men of Mulai Hafid's army advanced on the 5th instant to a point eight miles east of Bereshid, whither he had summoned several leaders of the Ulad Haris in order to incite their hostility against the French. These chiefs, however, refused to comply with the Shereef's proposals, whereupon he returned to Serrat. Contrary, therefore, to all denials, Mulai Hafid's own people incite to rebellion against the French, especially in the Shauja district. A further telegram from the General states that General d'Amade found Serrat occupied, but the larger part of the mahalla retreated upon the arrival of the French. The Kaid of Mzanza offered submission with the chieftains of his tribe.

From this cursory description it may be gathered that the green leaf becomes the tea of commerce in a wonderfully short space of time; in fact, within 24 hours from the time when the coolies started out with their baskets the young leaves have become made tea. Needless to say, the planters have learnt wisdom from the disastrous termination of the coffee boom, and planting is now carried on scientifically. Leguminous plants which are nitrogenous are forked into the ground at intervals, or the soil is treated with chemical manures, the young plants are ruthlessly pruned in their early days,—for the nature of the tea plant is to grow tall and weedy, to flower and seed,—so that the bushes may attain their requisite squatness. The result of this is that the plucking goes on uninterruptedly, for a bush that is plucked has thrown out new shoots and is ready for replucking every nine days. One trouble the planters have, a trouble known well enough in western lands viz. the labour problem. The Native Singhalese is a lazy mortal and altogether averse to the light-labour imported from Southern India. In this connection an extraordinary system of credit prevails which seems anything but healthy. The headman on an estate is advanced certain monies where-with to procure coolies. These coolies invariably become indebted to the headman who advances them money at usurious rates with the result that it appears that everyone on an estate is in debt save the owner. On some estates the estate advances run into thousands of rupees, so the coolies only get their wages every other month, as in the alternate months their earnings are paid to the headman. There are obviously rocks ahead, and the only remedy seems to be a sort of act of indemnity cancelling all debts, and this may be passed within a few years. For the rest, the coolies are well treated, the estate provides them with rice at rates below cost price, while there is always a district hospital within easy reach.

The upper slopes of the hill are crowned, as I have said, with virgin jungle. Save by paths cut here and there, the jungle is impassable, so dense is the undergrowth. Noticeable as one strolls for a few hundred yards along one of these paths is the deep stillness, save for the far-off chatter of a monkey, probably warning his mates of our approach; but for the most part there is a silence that may be felt. Leopards there are, indeed, and elk in plenty, while in many parts of the Ceylon jungles there are herds of wild elephants, but these animals shun the edges of the jungle and prefer the depths where man has rarely trod.

Nestling in the valley below Haputale is a large camp of galvanised iron buildings, in which the prisoners taken at Paardeburg and other places in the Boer war, were confined. A healthy enough situation for such a camp, 4,000ft. above the sea, but some unfortunate prisoners brought the germs of enteric with them and a little graveyard to the north of the camp is a sad reminder of many deaths in exile. The camp is now used by the naval authorities for the men of the Eastern squadron in the hot months.

A very early start back to Kandy was necessary, but the early rise is well repaid by seeing the gradual illumination of the hills opposite the bungalow by the rising sun. On the other side of these hills there is a sheer drop of 4,000 ft. and the low country slopes away to the sea. The train makes the long descent in somewhat quicker time and in a few hours one is back in the palpitating heat.
