THE REVAL ENTREVUE.

King Edward has left Reval and the world has been informed of the contents of the speeches exchanged on the occasion of the State banquet on board the "Standart" between His Majesty and the Czar of Russia.

Reading all the newspaper comments prior and subsequent to the meeting leads one to the happy conclusion that common sense prevails, even in the Press—the Press of England, Germany, France and Russia. For those irresponsible journals who take delight in giving publicity to expectations of their so-called London correspondents, who make the preposterous assertion that King Edward's policy aims at war with Germany, are in the minority: and yet their power should not be disregarded. They impart their drivel to a great extent to uneducated but receptive minds, receptive for anything they see in print, and when they read that it is quite clear now, since a General and an Admiral were in the King's suite, that the object of his visit in Reval was to agree, if possible, on the plan of attack, and to settle how Germany shall be crushed under the weight of the new, if only imagined, triple-alliance which is to bring unheard-of pressure to bear on the "Deutsche Michel" from three, if not four sides, they believe it. Utterances to this effect do no good but infinite harm. They unsettle minds and create feeling for which there is no justification. We cannot believe that these utterances serve any direct purpose; they are the outcome of narrow-mindedness, stupid bigotry and short-sightedness. Their writers and publishers know not what they do. A broad-minded view, generosity, tact: these are quantities negligible to them; they are satisfied with their surroundings, they drink their beer, and curse all that is foreign, especially English. These very types go to America or elsewhere and forget, nay are anxious to forget, their nationality. Poor patriots indeed, who sow the seed of strife while peace, peace, and again peace is what Europe needs to attain to blessedness for all mankind such as has never been enjoyed before.

Germany is armed to the teeth, and rightly so. Si vis pacem para bellum. Her very geographical position, quite apart from other factors, calls for such armament until the time comes when dreams of peace among the nations be realised. But it is not only her army and navy which make Germany so formidable; it is the progress, the enormous stride she has made since she was welded into an empire in 1871: in industry and commerce, commerce of the world. She has become a factor, and there is no need for an entente between Germany and England. They are commercial rivals: true. But they stand shoulder to shoulder in the fight for civilisation; they learn from one another all that will benefit their people, they extend their world beyond the confines of their home or native city; and they should respect each other. There is no menace in Germany's armaments; neither is there in King Edward's policy. His visit in Reval was a necessity for the peace of the world. The time has come when the Asiatic question calls for another solution, and to that end England and Russia must agree. Of course our heart's wish would be realized if we could bring order into chaos in Russia by the interference of the Powers; but would it not be folly to interfere where nature alone can cure, through the gradual enlightenment of the people? Away, then, with sentimental heart's longings! Make room for common sense and take no heed of the senseless rubbish presented to you by an irresponsible Press catering for the innocence of their readers.

After the above had already gone to press we read an article in the Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung from which we quote, as a fitting end, the following: "A short time ago the Neue Gesellschaftliche Korrespondenz published an unqualified article against the person of King Edward which the serious German Press tactfully disregarded; today the Tag brings a coarse attack on the Czar and Czarina in the form of a satirical poem. cesses like these testify to a lack of sense of responsibility with regard to one's own country which demands the strongest disapproval. The abuse of the liberty of the Press practised with the object of belittling foreign Sovereigns is detrimental not only to the reputation of the German Press abroad, but also to the political interests of the Empire."

GENERAL NEWS.

KING EDWARD'S RETURN.

The Royal yacht "Victoria and Albert" arrived at Kiel at 5 p.m. on Friday, escorted by the British ships, amid heavy rain. The German ships saluted with the Royal salute. The "Victoria and Albert" and four destroyers continued on their way through the Kaiser Wilhelm canal, whereas the battleships have to return to England via Cape Skagen.

NEWS FROM ENGLAND.

THE GERMAN WORKMEN'S LAST DAY.

Friday brought the visit of the German workmen from Düsseldorf and Duisburg to a close. They were not able to go to Windsor and therefore sent an address to King Edward to which Lord Knollys replied in the following terms: "I am much obliged to you for your letter. I will take great pleasure to acquaint the King on his return with the contents of it, and I am sure he will be glad to hear what a friendly reception his name has been accorded by a company of German workmen."

FRANCO-BRITISH EXHIBITION. THE CANADIAN BUILDING.

Varied and interesting exhibits will be found, according to the Globe, in the magnificent pavilion erected by the Canadian Government at the Franco-British Exhibition, at a cost of £18,000. The characteristic feature of the interior is the splendid decoration with Canadian hard wheat. This takes the form of trees of wheat, springing from the corners and pillars of the pavilion, and meeting in decorative arches on the walls. No fewer than 18,000 square feet of wall space have been covered in this manner, recalling to the visitor the Arch of Canadian Wheat which was such a feature of the street decorations at the time of the Coronation. Canada's great wealth of wheat is typified also in the Red Grain Hopper. This huge erection, standing on a base with a circumference of 160ft., is 50ft. high and surmounted by a square "hopper," from which can be seen issuing bags of wheat. The general form of the trophy is that of four cornucopias pouring out wheat in grain. Large portraits of the King and Queen and the Prince and Princess of Wales are placed at each side.

Another striking Canadian exhibit will be found in the cold storage rooms, in which a clever artist has modelled two remarkable groups in butter. One life-size tableau shows the King and President Fallières clasping hands; the other shows the landing of Jacques Cartier and two boatmen on the shore of the St. Lawrence. A statuesque Indian, also admirably modelled, represents Donocona, the famous Indian chief who received the discoverer. The total amount spent by the Canadian Government in exhibiting the Dominion's wonderful resources is £33,000.

"GOOD HOPE'S" RECORD SHOOTING.

Phenomenal shooting has been accomplished in the gunlayers' test by the "Good Hope," flagship of Rear-Admiral Sir Percy Scott, commanding the First Cruiser Squadron. In his memorandum to the ship Sir Percy Scott says: "I congratulate all concerned on the result, which places the 'Good Hope' top ship of the Navy at present." Immediately after the record of shooting was announced Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, commanding the Channel Fleet, signalled:—"Commander-in-Chief to 'Good Hope': I congratulate you on brilliant firing." The record is as follows:—
