THE STATE AND THE INDIVIDUAL.

On Friday, June 12th, on the occasion of his installation as Chancellor of Glasgow University, Lord Rosebery gave one of those vague if brilliant addresses with which his name has become more and more associated during late years. Bearing as they do the impress of a wide experience in high places, of a strong individuality, and of an inherent pessimism in the face of organized action, they are remarkable more for their striking phrases and occasional suggestions than for any sustained argument or consistent philosophy. They are the utterances of a man who has always chosen to go his own way without succeeding in the task of making others follow him; and, though it is possible that we read into them what we are expecting to find there, we seem to remark a shade of personal disappoint-ment, aliquid amari. When, however, Lord Rosebery chooses as his theme the place of the individual in the State, and dwells on the need of personal character to combat the temptations to remissness which the State holds out, we may justly assume that his words imply a sort of confession and a sort of defence. Lord Rosebery is not an egoist in any vulgar sense; he neither boasts of his achievements nor finds in himself a pattern for the world. But in his speeches he is reflective, speculative and inconclusive as only one can be who lives an intellectual life apart from other men and finds in the qualifications which his intelligence puts on the views of others the supreme test of right and wrong. That is a mental bias which unfits for the pursuit of politics; and which, if very decided, may also unfit for the less practical function of giving sound advice.

Lord Rosebery dwellt with great emphasis on the true merit of ? University. We must heartily agree with him in the belief that the great boast of a University should be, not that it merely fits its graduates for the professions but that it trains character. The distinction between teachers who are no more than pedagogues and teachers who are also men of the world well able to instil into the studies of their pupils a subtler feeling of experience and breadth of view than books alone provide, is one that is worth cultivating, and that has, in point of fact, been forced more and more during the last few decades. Here in Germany, where the status of the teacher is perhaps higher than in any other country and where the connexion between the University and the larger world is fostered without infringing academic excellence, Lord Rosebery's words are less applicable. He urges the students of Glasgow University to train themselves to be "men who absolutely would refuse to harness their intellects to the current cant of the day, men not angular but true to themselves and their faith." The great quality, he urges, is self-reliance, and its great enemy is the State. "Every day the public infringes on the individual." "The nation is being taken into custody by the State." These are happy phrases, clearly embodying high ideals of political activity, but, as practical advice, they appear to have a slighter value. A conscientious man, resolutely acting on such advice, would sever himself altogether from politics, since it leaves no room for the compromises which render politics possible. Character is essential, and common honesty of belief equally so; yet to demand these of citizens is a vastly different thing to demanding that, in politics, individual faith should assert itself without relation to collective action. "Politics," says Lord Rosebery, "were made for men, not men for politics." The proposition is not one that can be easily denied. By what construction, however, are we to conclude that individual self-reliance would make politics better? Under the present system of individualism prevailing among all self-governing peoples, the creed that we seek the greatest happiness of the greatest number accepts individual character as a powerful asset in communal development and efficiency; but one cannot pretend that it is rendered workable by the force of individual belief as distinct from the collective will. Men holding the strongest political faith must either lead or be content to follow; for all but the very few compromise is inevitable.

Possibly the root idea of Lord Rosebery's address was the feeling that compromise, so systematically exerted, is a corrosive element in political life, that from compromise to stagnation is not a distant step. From this point of view, there is every reason to dwell on the force of character and the danger of shibboleths. The great menace to a self-governing people is present when a class of professional politicians anticipate the opinions of the electorate by always having at their fingers' ends principles which spring from nowhere and which crystallize into policy before the nation has time to revoke its mandate. From hasty decisions of this kind, rendered probable by the rapidity with which elections are fought and the artificiality of the stimulus with which they are accelerated, much mischief springs. From many sources the integrity of public opinion is constantly assailed, but mainly through the mouths of self-seeking politicians and a plausible press. Against such abuses there is no safe-guard except the strength of individual opinion and the force of individual character. It is no exaggeration to say that the training a University provides thoroughly ensures the reliability of the educated, and therefore the most influential, vote. But when it is demanded that every participant in the affairs of his nation should be inured to the fallacies of public life by a schooling in adversity, when it is claimed that only by making the way as tortuous and stony as great pioneers must of necessity have found it, we confess we find it impossible to agree.

NEWS FROM ENGLAND.

SUFFRAGETTES AFLOAT.

At 4 o'clock on Thursday afternoon a large Suffragettes displaying printed scrolls, steamed down the river, and stopped in front of the Terrace of the Houses of Parliament at Westminster.

A small band was on board, and when it ceased playing, one of the leaders of the Suffragettes, believed to be Mrs. Drummond, stood on the little cabin roof and proceeded to harangue the comparatively few ladies who at that early hour had assembled on the Terrace for afternoon tea. She pointed to the banners of her comrades announcing the procession to Hyde Park which takes place today, and that "Cabinet Ministers are specially invited." She declared to all the members of Parliament present that as members of a democratic Legislature their proper place would be in the procession. Mrs. Drummond said she had been to gaol for her principles, and that was more than members of Parliament had done.

At the close of her address the steam launch moved slowly away, its band striking up as she left. Just at that moment the river police boat arrived on the scene, and followed the Suffragette launch in its return journey up towards Battersea.

THE "GLADIATOR" COLLISION.

APPLICATION TO CALL FURTHER EVIDENCE. Application was made on Thursday to Sir Gorell Barnes, President of the Divorce and Admiralty Division, for leave to call further evidence on behalf of the Admiralty in regard to the collision between the liner "St. Paul" and the cruiser "Gladiator."

Mr. Batten, K. C., for the Admiralty, said a letter from a lady was published in the Times on the 16th inst., stating that her attention had been called to the incident by reading the court-martial proceedings. The lady lived in a bungalow on the shore of the Solent opposite to where the collision occurred, and she said she saw something, and heart blasts sounded from one of the vessels. In these circumstances they wanted to investigate the evidence.

At the Royal Opera Fräulein Ida Hiedler made her farewell appearance in "Die Walkure," after occupying a high position in the institution for 21 years. Fräulein Hiedler's Sieglinde is one of the best of this popular artist's impersonations, and the applause she received on this occasion was cordial to a degree seldom witnessed. Fräulein Hiedler is specially fitted for that rôle; she represents the ideal German woman with the modesty and pleasing manner characteristic of her. For many years Fräulein Hiedler has been the only Sieglinde at this Opera, and it is difficult for the Berlin public to imagine a performance of "Die Walkure" without her. Immediately after the first act a storm of applause broke out and continued for some minutes. After the third act, the stage was filled with baskets of flowers and scarves, and the festive spirit of the audience made itself felt.

The performance as a whole was excellent. Herr v. Strauss conducted; Herr Ernst Kraus was in his best form as Siegmund, and received a large share of the applause. It was a brilliant occasion, and for Fräulein Hiedler a proof of the regret which is felt at her retirement. As she intends to appear occasionally, we hope that Berlin may often have the pleasure of seeing and hearing her M. O.

The Neue Königliche Operntheater will shortly open the summer season under the direction of Hofrat Köbke.

Brazilian guests at the Schiffbau Ausstellung. Señor Franzisko da Paola Rodriquez Alves, formerly President of Brazil and one of the most influential statesmen in that country, paid a visit to the Shipping Exhibition last week with his son and two daughters, accompanied by the Brazilian Consul, Herr Fritz. The party spent several hours in the building. The ex-President paid most attention to exhibits of goods exported or suitable for exportation to Brazil; while for the ladies the salons, the kitchen arrangements, the children's rooms, and the picture-gallery appeared to have the greatest attractive power.

The Mozart Orchestra dissolved. The Mozart Orchestra has ceased to exist as such, but the required guarantees have been given for the formation of a new orchestra under the well-known conductor Herr Oskar Fried. Next season Herr Fried intends to give a number of concerts with the new orchestra.

Negotiations are in progress with a conductor for the popular and accompaniment concerts. The new orchestra is to be called the Berliner Sinfonie Orchester, and the Blüthner Saal will be its home. Symphony concerts will also be given in the Mozart Saal under the leadership of Professor Karl Panzner.

At the Lustspielhaus the farce Die blaue Maus is having a successful run and has already reached its 50th performance. Moreover, the piece has found its way to the French stage, having been translated by M. Jacques Monier. The French version will be brought out next season at the Folies Dramatiques theatre in Paris.

Wilbur Wright, the American flying-machinist, has made such progress with the work he has in hand that he will be able to begin his attempts at flight in about four weeks' time; he intends to make them in the Sarthe Department.

An exhibition of grave-stone sculpture has been opened at the Kunstgewerbe Museum. Admission is free every day of the week except Monday.

A great Japanese Flower Fête (Hanamatsuri) was held on the 19th and 20th instant at the old Botanical Gardens, Potsdamer Strasse 75. This original idea was charmingly carried out. Bamboo avenues lighted by lampions, a pagoda temple, a street of Japanese shops, pleasant tea-houses with geishas as attendants serving tea in Japanese cups, Japanese fireworks—these were the main features. But there was music also, not all Japanese, provided by no less than three military bands; and a Japanese ball, graced by the presence of members of the Japanese colony, gave a brilliant finishing touch to the whole.

A Max Schillings Festival will take place at Bad Wildungen tomorrow and on Tuesday. Kapellmeister F. Meister,-with a strengthened orchestra, a mixed choir, and solo artists-will produce orchestral, works, chamber music compositions, and songs. The programme is to include: a symphonic Prologue to "King Oedipus"; the symphonic pieces "Seemorgen" and "Ein Zwiegespräch"; fragments from "Ingvelde," "Pfeifertag," and "Moloch"; the E-minor Quartet, and the "Glockenlieder."

As is the custom at the Stern Conservatorium the competition for the Gustav Hollander Medal will take place, after the twelve annual test concerts given by the pupils. The fears that have been expressed for the fate of the Anglo-American polar expedition are now set at rest. The leader of the expedition, Einar Mikkelsen, a Dane, has returned to London; he is putting the last touches to his book giving the history of the expedition. Their ship, the "Duchess of Bedford", was lost in the ice, as is known; but Mikkelsen and his companion, the geologist Leffingwell, succeeded in making highly important discoveries. With respect to the return journey he writes: "On the 16th of October last I started alone on my return journey from Flaxman Island in a sledge with ten dogs and 680 pounds of provisions. I had great difficulties with the dogs, as the balls of their feet were literally cut to pieces by the sharp ice, and I was obliged to shoot them. My provisions also fell short and I had to subsist partly on dog's flesh. At last I was able to rest and replenish my stock of provisions at Nome. My journey along the Yukon river, through the gold country, was more comfortable, and I reached open water at Noldez, after a land journey of 3,300 English miles over Arctic territory."

... It is a curious circumstance that practically every city and town boasts a meeting-place where one may learn the newest news, the latest scandal, or the most witty comments upon current affairs. The town pump was a veritable institution in England until quite recently, while in the rural American town the general rendez-vous is the "corner grocery store." Were we asked to name the centre of the world of art, music, or letters in Berlin, we should unhesitatingly point to Steinert's Weinstube, in the Kurfürstendamm, and a visit to this celebrated resort will confirm our judgment. It is not only for the quality of the refreshments that Steinert's is unique.

Mr. Butler Aspinall, K. C., for the owners of the St. Paul, said he was instructed to oppose the application.

His Lordship thought it desirable to have all the evidence available before the court, as it was a very important case.

Mr. Aspinall said he would leave himself entirely in the hands of the court, and finally it was arranged that the lady in question should attend to give evidence.

PAN-ANGLICAN CONGRESS. THE DRINK TRAFFIC.

There was a large attendance last Thursday at the Albert Hall, where the Bishop of Columbia presided, supported by the Archbishop of York, the Bishop of Kensington, the Earl of Lytton, Judge Herbert M'Donald (Canada), and the Rev. H. W. Anson (New Zealand).

The Globe reports this meeting as follows: The Earl of Lytton introduced the subject of "The Drink Traffic." He pointed out that the consumption of beer or spirits was not an immoral act. Total abstinence was a moral expediency, and they could so influence the individual, raise the standard of self-respect, uphold public opinion, and control the temptation of drink itself. The old saying of as "drunk as a lord" had passed away (laughter), and the process of improvement was largely due to education. That improvement went. on in all classes. Temperance policy had two objects; one was to prevent the desire for drink, and the other was to prevent as far as possible the opportunities for the abuse of drink. Government in its way could lead to the cultivation of self-respect in the individual (cheers). The large excess of public-houses led to hard drinking and gambling, and he regarded with dismay the excessive number of public-houses. For that reason he supported the Licensing Bill of the Government. It was necessary to educate public opinion on the subject (cheers).

Judge McDonald dealt with prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor, which secured entire Sunday closing, but was a failure.

The Bishop of Kensington said the drink traffic of the country was insufficiently controlled and called for reform. For fifteen years he had been engaged in temperance work in the Diocese of London, and he found that intemperance required personal tact, which should make the individual temperate (cheers). The aim of great temperance reformers was not prohibition. That had failed in this country, and it would never succeed in this country. He advocated the reduction of drinking facilities-a considerable reduction and a full and generous consideration of those whose interests were involved (cheers).

The Rev. H. W. Anson, of New Zealand, and others also addressed the meeting.

"LUSITANIA" HELD UP BY SHAM BATTLE.

The Cunard liner "Lusitania," which left New York on Wednesday for Liverpool, met with an unpleasant experience at the outset of her voyage.

The vessel, on entering the narrows just outside New York Harbour, was obliged to haul-to for twenty minutes because a sham battle was in progress. Projectiles from the big guns mounted on the forts on both sides of the channel were falling thick and fast, and all navigation had to be temporarily suspended.

So great was the concussion of the firing that very heavy damage was done on board the liner to window glasses and valuable crockery, and the loss is estimated at fully 20,000 dollars (£4,000).

SUFFRAGE SUNDAY.

To the Editor of the Daily Record.

Knowing well your great services in the Liberation War of Humanity (and I do not claim more for women than that they are at least as human as men), may I appeal to you to give publicity to this letter and to the motive with which I am submitting it? I do not speak on behalf of any organization, nor am I at all instigated by any member of any Union interested in securing the vote for women. I speak simply out of an overflowing heart and a spirit boiling with indignation at the coldness of a small section of the public towards our

In connection with our great triumphal march next Sunday, I have appealed to some of our most colebrated poets and authors to join with me in protesting against this tyrannical spirit; and I have received a number of most encouraging poems and letters. Are not these sufficient testimony to the justice of our cause?

To take some of the letters first, Mrs. H-mphry W-rd writes that owing to a previous engagement she regrets she will not be able to be present in Hyde Park on Sunday. She adds, however, that numbers are not everything, and that even a Guest may sometimes be a host in himself. Mr. G. B-rn-rd Sh-w says he has too great a contempt for women to refuse them the vote, and certainly too great a contempt for politics to advocate its acceptance. This, I find, is not altogether satisfactory; but is it not something of a triumph when the greatest Iconoclast of the Age is not, at all events, against us?

Mr. G. K. Ch-st-rt-n assures us of his heartfelt support, and asks whether it is not perhaps true that the vote is a finer reality when it remains unexercised. Votes, he says, do not lead to martyrdom, no votes do; and what we need, of course, is moral stamina.

Mr. R-dy-rd K-pl-ng sends us a thrilling marching song, of which I quote the refrain.

"March, march, march, to the sound of the drum and the fife; March, march, march, to the vote that is freedom

March, march, march, ye are hundreds of thousands strong;
Women of England, march to the sound of your battle song."

Mr. H-nry J-m-s replies in an octavo volume, but as he does not deal with his impressions beyond the half-second after he had cut open the first half-inch of the envelope of my letter, it is impossible to quote.

Mr. H-ll Ca-ne promises to let us have his views in a special edition of the Daily Mail.

Mr. William Sh-k-spe-re, in an amiable letter, suggests a National Monument.

Mr. S-m-rs-t M-gh-m says he is entirely in our favour. He will be engaged during the coming week on four plays dealing with our movement, which appears to him to hold great dramatic possibilities.

Mr. P-rcy B-sshe Sh-ll-y, formerly of Oxford, cables some energetic stanzas from Italy. I quote the opening lines.

"Christabella arose
From her desk of woes
Where the letters lay heaped in billions,—
From palace and hut
O'er rail and o'er rut
Summoning her bright millions.

She leapt down the stair
With a dare-devil air
Calling her cohorts to battle:
To the Park in the West
In their scorn of arrest
They match with a roar and a rattle;
Not fearing or doubting,
But lustily shouting
The cry of the Wopsolu martyrs,
And waving the banner
In absolute manner
Of conquerors, heroes, and starters."

L-rd H-w-rd de W-ld-n thanks us for our appeal. He thinks we are bound to win in the long run, and adds that he has commissioned Mr. T. E. Ell-s to write a poem in blank verse dealing with our Cycle of the town. Mr. Alfr-d A-st-n, writing from the Carlton Club, sends a brusque letter, in which he asks, in the name of Patriotism, why the women of England do not devote their energies to horticulture instead of dabbling in controversial matters.

Mr. W-lt Wh-tm-n's communication, coming as it does from the United States, is unintelligible, but it seems intended to be offensive.

Mr. R-b-rt Br-wn-ng declares himself deeply interested in the psychology of the movement. He has given me permission to make use of the following verses.

"THE LAST TALK TOGETHER.

We said—Now, Asquith, since 'tis so,
 Since now at length our fate we know,
 Since nothing all our noise avails,
 Since all your word seems meant for, fails,
 Since you have spoken as needs must be—
Our whole band rises up to twist
The coward or misogynist
To conscience qualms and fears,—We claim
Only the promise—Ah! the same
You gave to us. Blame, if you blame, Yourself alone. For us, we march along. See!"

We hear from America that the Mayor of New York and Mrs. George B. McClellan gave a dinner in honour of Consul-General and Mrs. T. St. John Gaffney, which was followed by a dinner party. Our readers may be interested to know that Mr. McClellan was born in Dresden.

Mrs. Gaffney has been ordered to take a cure in Carlsbad and left New York on the North German Lloyd steamer "Kronprinz Wilhelm" on June 16th. Consul-General Gaffney, who is at present at the Republican Convention in Chicago, will leave New York on the 24th and returns to his post at Dresden via Ireland and England.

Major-General A. W. Greely, of the U. S. Army has arrived in Dresden where he will stay for a

The Regatta. Besides the three local rowing lubs, the following clubs have entered for the international Rowing Regatta which is to take place his afternoon on the fine reach of the Elbe from Wachwitz to Blasewitz, beginning at 2 o'clock: the Ruder und Eislauf Verein Aussig; the Berliner Rudergesellschaft 1884, Berlin; the Ruderverein Wratislavia, Breslau; the Ruderklub Dessau; the Ruderverein Sturmvogel, Leipzig; the Ruderverein Germania, Leitmeritz; the Magdeburger Ruderklub, Magdeburg; the Rudergesellschaft Meissen; the Pirnaer Ruderverein, Pirna; the Ruderklub Regatta, Prag; Ruderverein 1878, Spindlersfelde. The numerous entries necessitate several preliminary races, which will take place over the same course at 8 o'clock this morning. A number of the above mentioned clubs have never before started in Dresden, and as all clubs have sent their best crews the occasion should afford good sport.

The XIII. Deutsches Bundeskegeln (thirteenth Congress of the Union of German Skittleplayers) is being held this year at Dresden under the patronage of His Majesty the King of Saxony, from the 20th to the 25th of this month. Today, at 11 o'clock, there will be a grand parade of the Club banners, starting from the Weisseritz Strasse and marching to the Festival Hall, on the ground at the Vogelwiese, by way of Wettiner Strasse, Post Platz, Wilsdruffer Strasse, Altmarkt, König Johann, Ring, Marschall, Feldherrn, and Blumen Strasse. In this parade there will be represented the clubs from all parts of Germany who have sent deputations, and many of Dresden's inhabitants have decorated their houses in honour of the

There were many lively scenes to be witnessed at the Hauptbahnhof yesterday, when hundreds of good-humoured "Skittlers" arrived in small detachments, and proceeded to refresh themselves and make each others' acquaintance at the Restaurant. The Congress was officially opened last evening with a Kommers, at which there was much jovial good fellowship, and -needless to say, with the thermometer at 80° in the shade during the daystreams of beer flowed down thirsty throats.

At the art-gallery of Emil Richter, Prager Strasse, in accordance with a generally expressed to 10.30 p.m., there will be a double concert on Probably in no other business in the world is competition so keen as in catering for the thirsty wayfarer. Time was when the term "beer" covered a multitude of sins, and the customer cared little for quality when the drink was "long." But the times have changed; the public palate has grown fastidious. Evidence in support of this fact is furnished by the brisk business always proceeding at the Stadt Gotha, in the Schloss Strasse, whither the man of discrimination invariably wends his way. To such a man Stadt Gotha beer is the only beer. Other varieties he regards as experiments, frequently attended with unpleasant results.

At the Central Theatre today there will be two performances: in the afternoon, at 3.30, Ein Automobilunfall (Panne), a comedy in three acts by Rich. Skowronnek, will be given at halfprices; and in the evening, at 8 o'clock, Der Teufel, a play in three acts by Franz Molnar, with Herr Albert Bozenhard in the title-rôle, will be performed for the second time, at the usual prices. Der Teufel will remain on the programme all the week; but from Sunday the 28th to Tuesday the 30th the series of performances will be interrupted, as on those days the general meeting of the Verein Deutscher Ingenieure will be held at this theatre, and the stage will be required for other than dramatic purposes. Herr Albert Bozenhard will appear again in Der Teufel on Wednesday July 1 and following days. Tickets for any performance may be obtained 8 days in advance, up to 2 o'clock daily at the office in the PLOT. Knight Hugo, with his attendant Veit, has been seeking adventure in accordance with the wishes of the Duke's daughter, Berthalda. Hugo falls in love with Undine, adopted daughter of a fisherman and marries her; though she says she has no soul, and is, in reality the daughter of Kühleborn, King of the water-spirits, who is very angry when he hears from Veit that Hugo may be unfaithful when he meets Berthalda again. Undine tells Hugo she is a water-spirit, and can only win a soul by a man's constancy. Berthalda is proved to be the daughter of Undine's foster-parents, and is turned out of the castle, but Hugo becomes unfaithful and Undine returns to her father, while Hugo takes Berthalds to live with him. He has all the wells closed, but Veit, in pity for Undine, uncovers one, and she appears just as Hugo is about to marry Berthalds. Hugo, in remorse, falls dead at her feet, the floods come up and cover everything, and Hugo's soul is pardoned on condition that he remains in the watery kingdom of Undine. PLOT. Welther von Stolzing, a young knight, is in love with Eva, the daughter of Master Pogner, a jeweller of Nuremberg. Eva tells him ber hand is promised to the winner of the prize for a master-song. David, the apprentice of Hans Sachs, a cobbler, tries to explain to Walther what he must do to comply with the rules of the Guild of Meistersinger's; but the rules are so complicated that he resolves to sing in his own way. Beckmesser, a clerk, is confident that he will win the contest and marry Eva. When Walther sings his trial song Beckmesser is made marker, and he gives so many bad marks that Walther fails to obtain entrance into the guild, though Sachs perceives the merit of his song. Walther meets Eva at night outside Sachs' shop. Beckmesser comes to serenade Eva, but Seche sings at his work so loudly, that the other cannot be heard. He implores Sachs to be quiet, and he consents on condition that he be allowed to tap on a shoe whenever Beckmesser makes a mistake in rhythm. The lady at the window whom Beckmesser believes to be Eva is really Magdalene, Eva's nurse, the betrothed of David, and the latter, believing his betrothed is being serenaded, sets on Beckmesser with a cudgel. A general uproar ensues, the apprentices joining in the fight. Sachs pulls Walther into the shop and pushes Eva into her father's house. The next morning Walther sings to Sachs a song which he has dreamed, and which delights the old man: he leaves it on the table, where Beckmesser, who has come in, sees it, and puts it in his pocket. But Sachs discovering this, allows him to keep it, telling him he can sing it if he likes. The singing contest takes place in the afternoon in a meadow, and after the solemn entry of the master-singers, Beckmenser excites universal decision by

L-rd Alfr-d Do-gl-s refuses to enter into any correspondence unless I agree that it should be made public in the columns of the Academy.

Mr. Al-x-nd-r P-pe sends us what he calls an Essay on Woman, but what is really a poem some few thousand lines in length. The following is a short

> "Anon Aurora gilds the ashen Spires; See, Clement's Inn lies glitt'ring in her Fires! The Heat of Noon descends upon the Town, Transforming Faces fair to luscious brown; For 'tis the Day when Beauty claims her Dow'r Of Honour from the tyrant Males in Pow'r. This is the Day when an angelic Throng Adorns the Streets for twice two Miles along; When Wisdom, lurking in transluscent eyes, Achieves Publicity, or, failing, dies."

I think, Sir, I have quoted enough to prove that even when every allowance has been made for the few dissentient voices on Parnassus, Right and Justice are on our side. Let me in conclusion quote a few lines from the poem of one of our own members who has suffered as well as sung.

> "We girded us with prison chains As though they had been chatelaines; We bore the tyrant's thongs. In solitude we racked our brains, Endured the law's barbaric pains, And nursed a martyr's wrongs."

On that note I beg leave to remain,

Yours faithfully,

Margaret Sowerbutts.

Excitement is growing in the camps of the Suf-fragists and the Suffragettes.

Ten thousand Suffragists, headed by Mrs. Fawcett and Lady Frances Balfour, marched on Saturday to the Albert Hall with 777 banners and bannerets flying, and on the 21st inst., 30,000 Suffragettes, among whom Miss Cristabel Pankhurst is the ruling spirit, will attempt to beat the record by marching to Hyde Park with 40 bands and more than 700 banners.

On Thursday afternoon the Suffragists, who are officially styled the National Union of Women's Suffrage Societies, were in session at Caxton Hall for the purpose of exhibiting the 77 large embroidered banners which had been specially made for Saturday's demonstration by the Artists' Suffrage League. Eighty ladies accomplished the task since Christmas, and the result is highly artistic, particularly in the case of the "famous women" series of symbolical designs. Such women have een honoured as Elizabeth Fry, George Eliot, Joan of Arc, Elizabeth Barrett Browning, St. Teresa of Spain, Josephine Butler, Mrs. Siddons, Queen Elizabeth and Caroline Herschel. The only living woman whose name appears on a banner is Florence Nightingale-"already an immortal," one of the Suffragists explained. Among the banners supplied by the Freedom League is a large one, worked in broad black and yellow stripes, bearing broad arrows and a representation of the gates of Holloway Prison, with the motto, "Stone walls do not a prison make."

A newspaper representative who called on the suffragettes at Clement's Inn inspected some wonderful dress novelties which are to startle London next week. The gorgeous regalia, with its golden epaulettes and peaked cap of purple, white, and green, which will be worn by "General" Drummond (in command of 3,000 London suffragettes), is hardly less striking than the white aprons, printed all over with rousing legends, which will distinguish a corps of ticket distributors. Almost the entire procession will be dressed in white, with decorations of purple, white, and green-purple for the royal Cause, white for Purity, and green for Hope.

Each of the 700 banners will be carried by four women in white, but there are also nine special banners, varying in value from six to thirty guineas, the designs of which have been kept secret. Typical mottoes are "Keep on pestering" ("C.-B.'s" words); "Woe to wobblers!" and "It's dogged as does it." Seven, presented by a lady, all read "For the sake of the unborn children!" One great attraction will be a body of French suffragists who are coming from Paris. Simultaneously with the Hyde Park demonstration the main body of French suffragists will meet in the Bois de Boulogne, and messages are to be exchanged by cable between the two assemblies. Precisely at five o'clock the 200,000 persons who are expected to attend the English demonstration will be asked to shout in unison, "Votes for women!"

At a meeting held on Thursday afternoon at the Fulham Congregational Lecture Hall under the auspices of the Women's Social and Political Union Miss Sylvia Pankhurst said that on the 21st inst. the women of the country were going to prove to the Prime Minister that they really did want the vote, and intended to have it. Miss Naylor, who presided, said a man might be the biggest fool on the face of the earth, but if he had a latch-key he had a vote.
