CONCLUSION OF THE FREE TRADE CONGRESS.

London, August 8.

At the final sitting of the Free Trade Congress yesterday a resolution was passed for the formation of a permanent international committee, whose aim it will be to promote free trade principles and make arrangements for the assembly of a second congress in 1910, to be held either at The Hague, Brussels, or Antwerp.

THE NULLI SECUNDUS.

(From our own correspondent.)

London, August 7.

The new military airship, "Nulli Secundus," continues to excite interest, especially since it is now the only existing one of importance in Europe built on the balloon principle. From all accounts "Nulli Secundus" is, generally speaking, in the best of health, none the worse for her recent trial run, and likely to be brought out again for further experimental trips at any time considered favourable. There will be no formal notice given either to the Press or to the public; and Colonel Capper has laid stress on the fact that "Nulli Secundus" is purely and simply an experimental vessel, from which it is hoped much may be learnt.

At present Colonel Capper has no idea of making a long trip; plenty of practice in steering, trials of rudders and planes of different sizes and shapes, training of different officers and men in handling the airship efficiently round about Farnborough, and efforts at improvement in these and other directions practically form the programme for a time. Doubtless a little later, when the engines appear thoroughly tuned up, when weather and other conditions are favourable, a longer journey will be attempted, and Londoners may again see "Nulli Secundus" soaring over their heads.

Sir Hiram Maxim, in an interview with a Press representative, said he had no faith in the balloon-ship of the Zeppelin type, and thought that the problem of flight would be solved, if at all, by a machine heavier than air.

"I have studied the question of aerial navigation with a great deal of care during the last twenty years," said Sir Hiram Maxim. "I have looked at it from every standpoint, and I do not think that it is possible to construct a balloon that will be of the least service for any purpose whatsoever except as a plaything. There is only one way to navigate the air, and that is by true flying machines heavier than the air, which depend altogether upon dynamic energy. There is a great deal more danger that England may be invaded by butterflies from Italy or Bulgaria than by a European army with the aid of balloons."

NEWS FROM AMERICA.

MR. HEARST'S PARTY.

No reference to the Presidential campaign this year would be complete without mention of "the new national party," of which Mr. William Randolph Hearst is the founder and apostle. Under the banner of Mr. Hearst walk the legions who are discontented with both the Republican and Democratic parties, a rather hybrid set, comprising men of all nations, Socialists, Labourites, "reformers" of various kinds. They profess to believe that both the great existing parties have outlived their usefulness, and that industrial and economic conditions demand that "the workers" should combine in their own behalf. It was thought at Denver, and apparently by the Democratic nominee, that Mr. Hearst would support Bryan. That is now out of the question. The Independence League, which is another name for Hearst's agents, have nominated their own candidate, a man named Thomas Higsen. Mr. Hearst himself is a clever man and a millionaire; he is the proprietor of a chain of yellow journals stretching across the country, and has founded many political clubs. The birth and progress of his Independence Party marks one of the greatest uprisings that the politics of the Republic have ever known. Mr. Hearst does not like England, and tells his readers that England is "the traditional enemy of America." This profession of dislike is made partly to please the Irish-American crowd, and also the German-Americans, two of the most important factors in American politics. Mr. Hearst personally is not a very magnetic man, but he has the gift of choosing good lieutenants and of expressing himself in a clear, catchy way. He is very loyal to his friends, and denounces with venom everything and everybody supposed to be in opposition to "the people."

The "Independence Party," though not four years old, says a contemporary, has given evidence of power which it would be foolish to deny. In the judgment of many the "Independence Party" carried the city of New York at the mayoralty elections under the leadership of Hearst. Under the candidacy of Thomas Higsen it has outvoted the Democratic party in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in a fight for the governorship, and ranks now as the second party in that State. It has swept the great city of Chicago and elected Dunne as mayor in a great campaign. As its candidate William Randolph Hearst polled more votes in the State of New York outside the city than any Democrat has polled for twenty years, and was only defeated by the defection of Senator McCarren in Brooklyn and Tammany in New York. It is growing now with great vigour in the East, in the Middle States, and in the South, and is, we are told, "the party of the future."

According to Mr. Hearst, from whom we quote, the great purpose of the Independence Party is to restore the power of the Government to the people and make their will supreme in the primaries, in the elections, and in the control of public officials after they have been elected. The second purpose of the new party is to annihilate the power of special interests by destroying their principal weapon, the corruption fund. The third purpose of the party is to correct some of the obvious financial and economic evils of the day. The fourth object is to frame certain lines of great constructive legislation in the interests of all the people. To those ends the Independence Party seeks to bring under one banner "all the real producers of wealth"—the farmer, the working man, and the non-privilege-seeking business man—and place the government in their control.

The advent of this "new national party" in American politics—focussing all the militant forces which have lately been active in the old world as well as the new—is a factor of universal interest that may possibly make the Presidential campaign for 1908 memorable. Mr. Hearst aspires to the White House, and the votes his party give this year may to a large extent determine his Presidential ambitions. We may also see to what extent the Hearst followers are likely to have a chance within a few years of fulfilling their intention "to carry all before them." Mr. Bryan's success or failure must apparently depend in a very great degree on their line of action. One may suspect that most of the votes given to Mr. Higsen will be taken from the orator of Nebraska.

Most of the big political questions—franchise, tenure of land, national education, State and Church, and the like—which still engage the countries of Europe, have long ago been thrashed out and decided in the United States, but in their place other questions quite as big, and vastly more perplexing, questions involving the rights and duties of capital and industry, trusts and consumers, municipal and State ownership, and the like, have sprung up and made politics more lively now than at any recent period in the history of the great Republic. Whether the general trend of things is for good or bad is a matter of debate, but that America from the standpoint of democracy still "marks the highest level, not only of material well-being, but of intelligence and happiness, which the race has yet attained," is the judgment not only of historians like Mr. Bryce, but of many other European critics, and, of course, is the universal view of Americans. But there are issues that are world-wide which no political system can evade, and with some of these the great Republic stands face to face.

THE BRITISH COLUMBIA FOREST FIRE.

Victoria, B.C., August 7.

Pestilence is feared at Fernie, owing to the conditions in which the homeless victims of the fire are dwelling. Two thousand women and children are gathered together, without provision for sanitation.

Two cases of small pox are reported. The heat aggravates the danger of the situation. Eighteen bodies have been recovered from the débris. The fatalities do not exceed forty. Michel is threatened.

OVER THE ALPS BY BALLOON.

Innsbruck, August 8.

Two gentlemen, Dr. Bröckelmann and Herr Härtel, intend on Monday to make a balloon ascent across the entire range of alps. The balloon has a gas capacity of 1,700 cubic meters. It is the chief intention of the aeronauts to take cloud photographs during the journey.

BERLIN

The Historical Congress delegates were received at the Berlin Council House on Friday. Minister of the Interior v. Moltke proposed the health of the rulers of the countries represented at the Congress. Dr. Reiecke, the Burgomaster, drank to the Congress and made an address of welcome. Sir John Rhys, replying on behalf of the delegates, proposed the health of Berlin and its administration.

Much regret will be felt among Consular representatives everywhere at the death of Baron Sternberg, the Russian Consul-General in London. Ever since he entered the foreign service of his country 12 years ago he had been associated with Great Britain, first as Consul at Melbourne for two years, and then in England itself. Distinguished both by his name and his fortune he gained rapid promotion when he joined the Russian Army, in which he rose to be one of its youngest colonels. He came of an old and distinguished family in the Baltic provinces.

Professor M. Hakonson Hansen, director of schools at Trondheim, considers that boys as well as girls should know something about cooking, so he has added this subject to the curriculum of one of the schools. The class is only a small one, being limited to ten, but the principle of selection had to be vigorously adopted, for as soon as the Professor made known the innovation he had fifty-eight applications for places; consequently the pupils were selected from their position in the ordinary school subjects. The examination is such as would appeal to all schoolboys, for it consisted in preparing a roasted joint, and potatoes, followed by pancakes. The boys also showed their prowess in making ordinary tea-cakes, and it may be assumed in testing their qualities.

I have had a conversation with Baron von Gaza at Henley (says a writer in a London evening journal), in the course of which I inquired why Germany had not sent over a larger representation for the Olympic Regatta. The baron is a very keen enthusiast on the subject of rowing, and is apparently disappointed that this form of sport is not sufficiently supported among his countrymen.

"In spite of the Emperor's desire to promote the sport of rowing in our country," he said, "my people are evidently not disposed to follow his Majesty's lead. I am a student in Berlin, and regret deeply that among our university students there is no tendency at present to take such sports as rowing seriously. Moreover, rowing is not in any way regarded as a fashionable amusement or sport—at any rate, not in Berlin. In any of the other countries represented at Henley, I suppose there would be no difficulty about a subsidy being found to send over two or three crews, and I can assure you that we have crews who could give a very good account of themselves at Henley or elsewhere."

Von Gaza's remarkable lack of style was a subject of general comment in Henley. He was coached by Arlett, a well-known local oarsman, who labours under the difficulty of not being able to speak a word of German, while his pupil cannot speak more than a sentence of English. The German won his race last Wednesday by sheer physical force. It seemed almost as if Sandow had got on to the river handling sculls for the first time. Von Gaza is a man of remarkable physical power; his arms are like iron, and, if he falls to "make good" in America, where he is going to scull next month, it will be through over-confidence in muscular power, but through no fault of his coach.

Apart from rowing and serious study at the Berlin University, he is a keen soldier, having two years ago completed his service as a "Freiwilliger" in the Prussian Life Guards, and he gave some interesting views on the subject of military service in Germany, and comparisons between the British Army and that in which he has served. He was very taciturn as regards his own achievements, but interesting on the subject of rowing and athletics in general.

A peculiar accident which took place recently in Zhukovsky-street, St. Petersburg, is described by a contemporary's correspondent. A man, evidently an ex-soldier who had been wounded in the late war, judging from his war-medals, his limp, and his general appearance, was crossing the street when a passing carriage knocked him down and ran over one of his legs, which broke with a sickening crack. All the spectators were horror-stricken, but the victim himself seemed to suffer more from anger than from pain, for, lying on the ground, he shook his fist at the driver, crying "That'll cost you two-and-sixpence, you stupid brute!"

A policeman and some charitable passers-by helped the furious veteran into another carriage and conveyed him carefully to the nearest hospital, where they discovered to their astonishment that the broken leg was an artificial one, the real limb having been left behind in Manchuria. The policeman afterwards accompanied the ex-soldier to the police-station, where a protocol was drawn up charging the "izvoschik" with careless driving and putting down the amount of damage done at 2s. 6d.

The topic of the day is, of course, the lamentable accident to Count Zeppelin's famous balloon, the destruction of which has occurred just when the intrepid inventor appeared to be within an ace of his long-expected triumph. The telegrams said that the Count was inconsolable after the accident, and this we can well believe; but it is to be hoped that the enthusiastically generous spirit now being so materially displayed by the country at large will instil new determination into him. If ever he is in Berlin

Count Zeppelin may be sure of a right royal welcome at Steinert's Weinstube, in the Kurfürstendamm, where indeed every stranger is certain to meet with all modern comforts, and the best that there is in the way of cooking, wines and liquors. The fame of this hostelry has no doubt reached the shores of Lake Constance long ere this.

DRESDEN

According to the Dresdner Anzeiger of Friday, one of the members of the American colony in Dresden, himself an enthusiastic oarsman, has ordered the design and striking of a silver medal for competition among American scullers; and intends arranging for one to be rowed for by Germans also. The medal will be 45 millimetres or about two inches in diameter, and weigh about 35 grammes. On the obverse will appear a bas-relief of a sculler in his skiff, modelled from life; on the reverse side a laurel wreath with place for the name of the successful amateur oarsman. The conditions for competition have not yet been announced.

A telegram from Carlsbad reports the arrival there of two men of mark in the persons of Dr. Jameson and Major Dreyfus.

The famous Frenchman is preserving the strictest incognito, with a view to avoiding the attentions of the crowd.

The Great Art Exhibition Dresden, 1908. The sale of season tickets at half-price (3 marks) since the 1st instant has been active, and, as the Exhibition will remain open fully two months longer and season tickets admit to the concerts and general out-of-doors arrangements as well as to the Palace itself, the price is very moderate. Special arrangements already made are as follows:—on the 13th instant, Thursday next, a monster concert by three military bands, viz. those of the Schützen regiment No. 108, the Infantry regiment No. 177, and the Jäger battalion No. 13; on Monday the 17th instant a grand garden fête, with illuminations and fireworks; on Tuesday the 25th instant a grand illumination of the park, in which special movable novelties will be introduced. The performances of the Tyrolean Sänger- und Jodlergesellschaft in the Jägerhof are very popular, and not less so those of the Hungarian band in the Ratskeller.

At the art-gallery of Emil Richter, Prager Strasse, the Rysselberghe collection will continue to be exhibited till towards the end of the week, when it will be replaced by a collection of the works of the Munich painter, Edmund Steppes. In the side room there are now hung pictures by Professor Reynier, of Burghausen, M. Gregorovius and O. F. Leu, of Munich, Moritz Pretzsch, of Berlin, Giuseppe Casciaro, of Naples, and W. Lange, of Düsseldorf; these will be removed in a few days to make room for a collection of water-colours by Professor Onorato Carlandi, of Rome, whose subjects are chiefly taken from that city or its surroundings. The etchings and lithographs by the Dresden artist, Professor Sterl, are still exhibited in the small room.

The programmes of the orchestral concerts at the Royal Belvedere today and tomorrow are as follows. Today (Sunday):—

- (1) Freiwilligen-Marsch, Trenkler. (2) Overture "Rouslane et Ludmilla, Glinka. (3) Tarantella, Jose. (4) Luna-Walzer, Lincke. (5) Overture, "Maritana," Wallace. (6) Behüt' dich Gott, Lied, Nessler. Scherasmin, his esquire	Herr Scheidemantel.

PLOT. Oberon has quarrelled with Titania, and they have vowed not to be reconciled until they find a pair of lovers faithful in adversity. Oberon's servant Puck, wandering to find what his master needs, hears of Höon of Bordeaux who, having slain Charlemagne's son in a duel, has been ordered to go to Bagdad to slay the favourite sitting on the Caliph's left and to wed the Caliph's daughter, Rezia. Puck makes Höon and Rezia see each other in a vision and fall in love with each other. Oberon gives the former a magic horn and to his esquire, Scherasmin, a magic cup. Rezia is to marry Babecan, but she has hated him ever since she saw Höon in her dream. Fatima, her maid, hears of Höon's arrival in Bagdad. At the beginning of the second act the Caliph is about to celebrate his daughter's nuptials, but Höon, recognizing Rezia as the maiden of his dream, kills Babecan. The Turks attack him, but Scherasmin remembers the horn in time and on his blowing it, Oberon transports the lovers to the sea shore where, together with Scherasmin and Fatima, they embark on a ship. Oberon, to make trial of their mutual love in adversity, bids Puck raise the spirits of the storm. They are shipwrecked. Rezia is captured by pirates and Höon, attempting to rescue her, is wounded and left senseless on the beach. Scherasmin and Fatima are sold as slaves to the Emir of Tunis. Höon has been thrown into a magic sleep by Oberon and, on waking after seven days, finds himself in the Emir's garden. Fatima discovers that Rezia is in the Emir's harem. Höon receives a message bidding him come to the myrtle tower at night, but is horrified to find the lady who meets him is Roschana, the Emir's wife, who has fallen in love with him. The Emir discovers the pair and orders Höon to be burnt and Roschana to be drowned. Rezia begs for Höon's life, but the Emir will not listen and orders her to be burnt with her lover. Scherasmin is in despair, but finding the horn, blows it and all the Emir's slaves find themselves compelled to dance to its strains. THE NEW YORK EDUCATION BOARD.

(From our own correspondent.)
The Board of Education for the City of New York is in a certain sense a public carrier. It undertakes the conveyance of several hundred children daily from their homes to their school, and back. In the estimates for next year the sum of 90,000 dollars is provided for the transport of blind, deaf and dumb, and suburban school children whom the Board, in consideration of the long distances of their homes from the schools, enable to attend school, either by omnibus or by street car, at the public cost. 120 omnibuses and 275 tram-cars are required daily for this purpose.

THE SULTAN'S WHAT-IZZET.
[The Globe describes Izzet Pasha as "the worst of the Sultan's advisers."]
Who is it, when the Sultan goes
To races, makes his purse grow thinner,
Bidding him back some wrong 'un, which
He says is sure to be a winner?
Who leads the poor, dear man astray
In every single kind of way?

Who urges him to buy a car
Palpably groggy and inferior,
Which, ere it's covered twenty miles,
Goes all to bits in its interior?
Who puts him from the very start
At every turn right in the cart?
Izzet's the man. His guiding hand
Has made his master's credit totter:
He is a squab, a pin-head rube,
A clam, a flat-fish, and a rotter.
Which, being so, it's hardly queer,
That he's seen fit to disappear.
