THE INVASION OF LONDON.

The cosmopolitan invasion of London has begun. Tourists from abroad are arriving in such numbers that the present holiday season promises to beat all records. Fifty thousand visitors from America, France, and Germany, at a moderate estimate, are already in London, and fresh arrivals are pouring in at the rate of twenty thousand a week. The London season is only beginning, but the hotels, restaurants, and West End shops are enjoying a holiday boom. Most of the larger hotels are full to overflowing with guests of all nations. The streets are filled with strangers from everywhere, who are spending something like £500,000 a week.

The visitor's list is made up as follows:—

Americans	12,000	Colonials	6,000
French	10,000	Other nationalities	13,000
Germans	9,000

Each visitor on an average passes a week sight-seeing in London, and spends at least £10, making a total of half a million a week.

Americans and colonials in tourist garb of brown, with slouch hats, may be seen by scores in the Strand, and portly Germans and dapper Frenchmen carrying guide books are seeing more of London in a week than most cockneys have seen in a lifetime. "It should be a record season," says the manager of the Savoy Hotel. "London is becoming the pleasure centre of the world. Paris at one time held the first place, but all good Americans and foreign holiday-makers now try to 'do London' as well." The tide of travel reaches high-water mark at Selfridge's, and a London press representative on Thursday found the American, Colonial, French, and German drawing-rooms there crowded. "We have been busy all day answering questions in all languages," said the young woman in charge of the Information Bureau, who is known as the best informed woman in London.

"More than a thousand German visitors have come here already, and most of them have signed their names in our visitors' book."

FRENCHMEN AND THEIR NAVY.

The French Navy League, which was founded in 1899 on the model of the Navy Leagues of England and Germany, has just published its tenth yearly report. Once more the general indifference of the mass of the French people to all naval matters is brought very strongly to light. During 1908 the membership was increased by only 2,774 new members, making a total of only 12,008 members, belonging to 72 branches, of which 27 are abroad. The German Navy League has now 307,884 single members, 699,679 incorporated members, and 3,376 branches. The difference is most striking.

EVENTS IN TURKEY.

Paris, May 8.
 The Liberté states that the French and English Governments have resolved to make urgent representations at Constantinople as to the danger that threatens the Christians in Asia Minor in consequence of Mussulman fanaticism; and to draw the attention of the Turkish Government to the fact that any delay in the satisfactory settlement of the matter would oblige the Powers to take speedy and direct measures of their own.

Constantinople, May 7.
 Today's Selamlık was on a still more simple scale than the one held on Friday last. The Sultan was loudly cheered. Shevket Pasha, the Commander-in-Chief, paid visits to the Ambassadors this afternoon.

The Grand Vizier, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, and the Minister of the Interior have assured the diplomatic representatives that the internal condition of Asia Minor has become more quiet, and that all necessary measures have been taken for the complete tranquillisation of the country and the restoration of order.

According to information given by the Porte, a military centre has been established in each Vilayet, with orders to pacify it thoroughly.

Constantinople, May 8.
 The reports that the massacres in the Vilayet Adana were instigated by Abdul Hamid are disputed in authoritative quarters. In the interests of the respect due to the Sultanate, the Caliphate, and State authority, steps are being taken by the Porte and the chief military authorities to counteract the gross and increasing calumination in word and in writing which is arousing great indignation among the Mohammedan priesthood, in old-Turk circles, and in some Albanian, Kurd, and other districts.

VENEZUELA'S TREATMENT OF AMERICANS.

New York, May 7.
 According to a telegram from Kingstown (St. Vincent) an American seaman, named Payne, who has escaped from gaol in Venezuela, states that the officers and crew of the American whaler "Carrie Knowles" are prisoners in Venezuela. The ship, Payne declares, was wrecked off the Venezuelan coast, and the authorities arrested the crew, all the members of which are still alive. The "Carrie Knowles" left Provincetown (Mass.), on January 27, 1904, and this is the first news of her.

GREAT STRIKE THREATENING FRANCE.

(DAILY RECORD CORRESPONDENT.)
Paris, May 7.

Paris awaits tomorrow the outbreak of a great national strike, the natural result of the Government's vacillating attitude towards its postal officials. The forces of associated labour are marshalled against the Government, and neither side shows the least disposition to yield an inch. If this strike occurs, as tonight there appears every likelihood, it will be a thousand times more paralysing than the recently patched up trouble. Every branch of Governmental employes has promised to support the General Confederation of Labour, which is master of the situation. The authorities are feverishly preparing emergency measures in view of the coming cataclysm of the postal service. Private automobiles are being hired by the hundred; carrier-pigeons by the thousand have been requisitioned and are held in readiness to establish flying mail services between Paris and the suburbs. Regimental telegraphists are under orders to assume charge of the head telegraph office immediately word comes, and an attempt to deal with the accumulations of mail matter which must follow upon a strike will be made by soldiers temporarily assigned to the purpose. France tonight is standing on the brink of social and industrial paralysis; some there are who prophesy that it will prove a sweeping revolution, the smallest consequence of which would be the downfall of the present Government.

Paris, May 7.
 The Union of Post, Telegraph, and Telephone Office employes will have a proclamation placarded tonight declaring that the Government has not kept its promises to the employes, who are determined to defend their rights and freedom.

Paris, May 8.
 Seven Post Office officials, summoned to appear before the Court of Cassation, have signed a declaration that they will not appear. The new syndicate of Post Office employes already numbers 3,000 members. The meetings of Post Office employes held on Thursday evening in Paris and the provinces resolved to employ all means, including a strike if necessary, to obtain what they demand. The syndicate of railway workmen of France and her colonies has given notice of a general strike if Parliament rejects the Old Age Provision Bill, and declared its approval of the proceedings of the Post Office employes. On the other hand the Congress of engineers and firemen on the Paris-Lyons-Mediterranean line, which assembled at Marseilles, passed a resolution declining to act with the General Workmen's Union.

Paris, May 8.
 M. Barthou, the Minister for Public Works, has informed a representative of the Matin that the Government will maintain an inflexible attitude towards insubordinate Post Office officials. Post Office employes, he said, had never hitherto ventured to deliver such unequivocally revolutionary speeches at public meetings as the nine Post Office officials who are summoned to appear today before the Court

The following letter from a Berlin reader speaks for itself, and we print it as received, without comment:

The Editor of The Daily Record.

Dear Sir:—

To an Englishman like myself, resident abroad for more years than I care to recall, there is something particularly inspiring in the whole-hearted movement to draw together our compatriots for the purpose of celebrating national festivals under an alien sky. From the first I have been an advocate of such a movement, and knowing what has been done towards the same end by British communities in other Continental centres, I am naturally optimistic as to the ultimate result of the Berlin experiment. The efforts of your paper in supporting the cause are, I feel sure, greatly appreciated by your British readers, and the timely word of encouragement contained in the Earl of Meath's letter which you recently published should have the effect of stimulating the energies of those gentlemen who are loyally giving their valuable time to the propagation of the Berlin movement.

There may be some to whom the mere singing of the National Anthem and the display of the National Flag—rightly advocated by Lord Meath—appear as simple displays of jingoism; indeed, I have heard this view put forward by several of my compatriots. I would remind them, however, that, as David Field once put it, Patriotism has its roots deep in the instincts and the affections. Love of country is the expansion of filial love. We English people pride ourselves upon our deep-rooted affection for home, but it must be conceded that many of us manage to effectually conceal this love. The American, the German, and the Frenchman are less diffident. They are proud of their nationality, and they are not ashamed of showing their pride of it. I have spent the greater part of my life in foreign countries, and have never ceased to be struck with the close bonds which prevail among the resident communities of the nationalities I have named. They have their own clubs, their own social societies, and their own special places of meeting, and on every notable date in the history of their country they assemble together to celebrate it in some appropriate way.

The Englishman is different. Whether by temperament or choice, he professes to regard such enthusiasm as "bad form" or "foote." When he is prevailed upon to put in an appearance at such gatherings he sits with an unmistakable expression of boredom on his face, and joins in the celebration of his country's greatness half-heartedly and apologetically, as much as to say: "I suppose I have to do this, but it is awful rot all the same." I am certain that my remarks will be borne out by other observant compatriots, and I am only inflicting them upon you because the present juncture is a critical one in the life of the British community in Berlin. If the present consolidation movement is successful, it is certain to have far-reaching beneficial results. Among other things, it would have the effect of greatly increasing the number of our fellow-countrymen and women in this city, whither they would come in the knowledge that in a strange land they would still find themselves in the midst of sympathetic fellow-subjects who would give them the advice and encouragement so often needed.

One word further, if I may be permitted to trespass upon your courtesy. It must be a matter of deep regret to every English person abroad that our home Government is adopting such a contemptuous attitude towards the Empire Day celebration. In view of this attitude, it is all the more incumbent upon us here to show our short-sighted politicians that their little-Englandism finds no echo across the seas. The limited horizon of some of our present legislators is due to their parochial ignorance of anything outside their own home boundaries. They should be compelled to make the "grand tour" before assuming office, and I hope that at some future date this suggestion will be taken seriously by the English electorate.

Yours faithfully,

A BRITISHER OF THE OLD SCHOOL.

Miss Bertha Bloomingdale, of San Francisco, has arrived in Berlin and is staying with friends at Bamberger Strasse 38. Miss Bloomingdale is to remain in Europe indefinitely, as she contemplates touring the Continent.

Madame Schumann-Heinck, in conversation with an American interviewer on the subject of Director Hammerstein's intention to perform Richard Strauss' "Elektra" in New York, is said to have expressed her opinion on the probability of the performance being a success as follows:—

"If people in America wish to hear music, and not noise, the opera will not please them. It is said of me that I have a pretty strong voice. I sang Clytemnestra in Dresden and Berlin; but Strauss has out-Wagnered Wagner, and through the thunderous din of the orchestra no voice can pierce. Then whole herds of gattle come upon the stage, and—of Cassation had made. At those meetings a small minority of the officials had bound themselves to advocate anti-military and anti-patriotic views, and had so forfeited the last remaining good-will towards them. Such proceedings could not be tolerated. The Government had taken measures to meet a fresh Post Office strike if it should occur. They knew they could count on public opinion and on the immense number of business men, manufacturers, and workers who would not allow people who harmed them to go unpunished. Alluding to the resolution of the railway men to establish a strike referendum, the Minister said he had full confidence that the great mass of the railway personnel well knew that the Government had done everything to hasten the discussion of the Bill for retiring allowances in the Senate. But, whatever might happen, the Government was firmly resolved to do coolly and calmly, but energetically, the duty imposed upon them by the national interests.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS OF ENGLAND.

(DAILY RECORD CORRESPONDENT.)

London, May 7.

The party of German labour leaders who have been visiting this country as the guests of the International Arbitration League, left London yesterday on their return journey.

Mr. Carl Goldschmidt, the leader of the party and president of the Trade Unions of Germany, told a Press representative that they had received many and warm expressions of friendship. Every member of the party was perfectly delighted with the welcome which had been extended. They would leave the richer in friendship and experience.

One of the things with which he had been particularly impressed was the striking contrast in London between poverty and prosperity. Comparing England with Germany, he said they might be likened to a gold coin, each with some alloy, but nevertheless a gold coin. His friends were going away with the absolute conviction that there is no hatred or enmity among the English against the Germans any more than there is among the German people against the English. He attributed the much-talked-of illfeeling "to the work of scaremongers for ulterior motives."

He desired to correct an impression which had got abroad that they had made an unfavourable comparison between the physical standard in England and Germany, to the disadvantage of England because of the fact that there is no compulsory military training in this country. The statement was not true. Physically the average Englishman was not inferior to the average German. The German had his military training while the Englishman had his sport.

London, May 8.

At the annual dinner of the German Hospital held last evening, the Duke of Argyll, after the toasts of the King and Queen and Royal family, proposed the health of the German Emperor, pointing out his Majesty's good-will towards the German Hospital, as proved by his yearly contributions to the funds.

CASTRO'S HOPES BLIGHTED.

Santander, May 8.

Ex-President Castro of Venezuela arrived here last night.

The recently-appointed Venezuelan Consul here, who bore a part in the revolution in Venezuela by which General Gomez became President of the Republic, has been interviewed with regard to the statements of General Castro, concerning his treatment by the Venezuelan Government.

The Consul denied that the private interests of the late President had been injured. On the contrary, the Venezuelan Government was protecting the administrator of General Castro's property in the discharge of his functions. He also denied the statement that President Gomez was a shareholder in the Electricity Company of La Guaira which has begun legal proceedings against General Castro.

The Consul added that it was ridiculous for General Castro to profess to believe that the country would recall him, seeing that the whole country was against him. As to a revolution, if one broke out, it could only be the work of some madman, and would be quickly disposed of by the Government.

THE CRISIS IN PERSIA.

Teheran, May 8.

A conference took place at the British Embassy at which plenipotentiaries of the Shah, and the Russian Minister, as well as the British Minister, were present. In compliance with a wish expressed by the Shah, the Ministers explained certain points in the programme of the 22nd of April last. It is believed that the Ministers gave the Shah's plenipotentiaries to understand that they would consider a refusal on the part of his Majesty to accept the advice contained in it as a rejection of the whole programme.

GERMAN OFFICIAL SALARIES.

Berlin, May 7.

The Budget Committee of the Reichstag has fixed the salaries of diplomatic and consular officials, in accordance with the "compromise" proposals, as follows. The salaries of Consuls are raised: those between M. 4,500 and M. 7,500 to sums between M. 4,800 and M. 7,800; those of diplomatic agents and Consuls-General between M. 7,500 and M. 11,500 to amounts from M. 7,800 to 12,000. The pay and allowances of officers in the Army were also discussed. According to the compromise proposals, Lieutenants and Senior Lieutenants of from one to three years' service are to receive M. 1,500; of from four to six years' service, M. 1,700; of from seven to nine years' service, M. 1,900; of from ten to twelve years' service, M. 2,100; and from 13 years' service and upwards, M. 2,400. The State Secretary of the Treasury said that those amounts would involve an increase on the Government proposals of M. 1,300,000. The Government could not make a conclusive statement as to its position. The proposed amounts were then adopted.

BULGARIA AND THE POWERS.

Sofia, May 7.

It is reported that Turkey and individual Great Powers have demanded an explanation as to what right King Ferdinand has to assume the title of King of Bulgaria. This makes bad blood in Macedonia. The Bulgarian Government intends to address a memorandum to all the Powers, justifying the title historically.

At the Scots Church today the Rev. T. H. Wright will preach in the morning at 11 o'clock on "The true heroic in life"; and in the evening, at 6 o'clock, will lecture on "The healing works of Jesus." Mr. Wright, it should be mentioned, has made a special study of the whole question of the New Testament "miracles" in relation to modern scientific knowledge and psychology. He will follow the present lecture by another, on "The raising of Lazarus."

We are asked to announce that an excursion is being arranged for members of the Scots Church congregation, and any of their friends, for Saturday next, May 15th. Train will be taken at 11.45 a.m. from the Hauptbahnhof to Moritzburg, and seven hours will be spent in the neighbourhood of that romantic and picturesque village. The May verdure and blossom will be at its best, and the Royal castle is in itself a great attraction. Names of intending participants in this excursion should be given in at the Manse, Bernhard Strasse, as soon as possible.

The Aula of the Technische Hochschule was filled to overflowing on Friday evening when Mr. J. C. Powys, M.A., delivered the sixth lecture of the present course, on "Hamlet." Prince and Princess Johann Georg were again present. The lecturer was in his usual admirable form, and his opening words gripped the audience and held them breathless. The lecture was a crushing indictment of the modern tendency—the Teuton tendency, as Mr. Powys was careful to explain—of delving too deeply into the soul of things, the insatiable desire to know, with its resulting apotheosis of scepticism and unwholesome effect on mind and body. Here the lecturer was on favourite ground. He stands for the salubrious in art. He is an implacable enemy of modernism as we understand it in its relation to poetry, the drama, and music. His attitude, in fact, is so strongly tinged with the ideals of Ruskin that the line of demarcation between the two would be difficult to follow were it not for our previous experience of Mr. Powys' methods. He shuns the neurotic as he would the devil, but the reaction is so powerful that it carries him to the verge of the other extreme, as remarked in these columns on the occasion of the "Henry V." lecture. The Teuton in us, he says, is suffering from a virulent attack of the disease which sapped the manly confidence of Hamlet, and left the prince a prey to his own morbid temperament and disbelief. The case for the wholesome old ideals of faith and simplicity was argued with all the fine eloquence and lucidity to which we have become accustomed. The magnetism of the lecturer was vividly felt on this occasion, as he swayed the large audience, comprising people of widely divergent temperament and sensibility, at his pleasure. In spite of his strong poetic feeling which is discernible in every phrase and every action, the will that invests the orator with his power of moving multitudes predominates in the artistic cosmos of this literary champion.

The next lecture will be delivered on Tuesday evening at the usual hour of 8 o'clock, the subject being "King Lear."

The guards in the city today are furnished by 2nd Grenadier regiment No. 101, whose band plays about 12.30 p.m. in the Neustadt.

Please address: K. 189, Daily Record office.

It is very unfortunate that the past week brought so many cold days, if only because the last few days were just those on which the budding trees could be seen in all their radiant glory. Dresden is more than usually favoured in regard to wooded surroundings, and no visitor should miss an excursion to one or other of the many sylvan resorts which are now to be seen at their best. An excursion by steamer along the Elbe is to be recommended, though if the day is inclined to be chilly the tourist should turn his steps towards the Heide, or, again, to the Tharandt valley, at both of which places the luxuriant foliage is a delightful sight.

Royal Opera House.

Tonight, beginning at 7.30, ending after 10.30. Carmen. Opera in four acts. Music by Georges Bizet. Cast: Carmen, Fraul. v. d. Eibenschütz); Mercedes, } (Frau Bender-Schäfer); Lillas Pastia, innkeeper, Herr Seiler.

PLOT. Don José, a soldier, is loved by a peasant girl Micaila, but he forgets her when he meets the handsome gipsy Carmen, to whom he becomes betrothed; Carmen has been arrested; but Don José contrives for her escape and promises to meet her at the inn kept by Lillas Pastia. Meeting her there with the other gipsies, in his infatuation Don José swears; but the fickle Carmen transfers her affection to the bullfighter Escamillo. He and Don José fight. Escamillo is worsted, but Carmen slays her former lover's arm. Micaila persuades Don José to come and see his dying mother. A bullfight takes place in Madrid, and Carmen, though warned of Don José's threats of vengeance, determines to be present; but at the moment of Escamillo's victory Don José stabs Carmen through the heart. Composer: Bizet, born 1838, died 1875.

Bary; Irene, his sister, Frau Abendroth; Stefano Colonna, head of the family Colonna, Herr Schwarz; Adriano, his son, Frau Bender-Schäfer; Paolo Orsini, head of the family Orsini, Herr Plaschke; Raimondo, legate of the Pope in Avignon, Herr Puttlitz; Cecco del Vecchio, } (Herr Nebuschka); Baroncelli, } Roman citizens, (Herr Löschcke); A messenger of Peace, } (Fraul. Keldorfer).

PLOT. Rienzi, a Roman notary, abetted by the papal delegate Raimondo, dreams of throwing off the yoke of the haughty patricians. The head of the Orsini tries to abduct Irene's sister, but she is saved by Adriano Colonna, a member of the rival faction. The nobles leave Rome to fight out a quarrel, and the people shut the gates and elect Rienzi tribune. A plot to murder Rienzi by the Orsini is betrayed by Adriano, and the nobles are condemned to death, but at Irene's entreaty Rienzi relents and pardons them. They again rebel and in a battle the chief of them are slain; this turns Adriano against Rienzi. The people begin to distrust Rienzi, the church excommunicates him, Adriano in vain implores Irene to fly with him. She and Rienzi retire to the Capitol, which is set on fire in the midst of a popular rising, and they, together with Adriano, perish in the flames. Composer: Richard Wagner, born 1813, died 1883.
