De laudibus artis Musicæ, Spectabiles & Præstantes Viri, Domini colendissimi, multi multa dixêre, quibus eius tam excellentiam & dis ac ne vix quidem, posterius verò non tam suo elogio, quàm ipsius artis augusto decore ac blanda maiestate, quæ duo admirationem & fauorem omnium facile secum trahunt, assecuti. Quotus enim quisque est, qui concentu harmonico, etiam nullo prauo encomij lenocinio, non in stuporem & quodammodo ex tra sese abripiatur, & quemadmodum Chium, vt est in proverbio, hedera suspensa non indigere, ita nec Musicam, nacula numinis prouidentia commissa sint, quibus & occupationum multitudo & rerum affluentia facile musices fasti aduerso concederet nihil absque alternatione quietis & laboris durabile esse, quietis verò, otij atq; adeo voluptatis ra laudatissimo Musices exercitio, quàm astragalis decentiorem duceret: deinde, vt mecum succenseret ijs, quorum aures vsq; adeo aut delicatæ sunt aut occalluerunt, vt maiori audito concentu harmonico, quàm classico vel fortassis equi hinnitu, bile ac nausea corripiantur, quos ego, quacumq; tandem in fortuna constituti sint, centaurorum quàm homi num similiore, potius ipse ad Pelethronios, quàm in Phocidem relegandos censeo. Dauidem cerè Prophetico Spi ritu Regem, virum ipse DEO desideratissimum, hiltoria & Psalmi ipsius testantur, non opilionem modo vel exulem, verùm etiam Regno iam inauguratum, ad eius ipse fastigium euectum, quinimo finitimarum nationum iam victorem ac triumphatorem, ad Euphratem vsque propagatis imperij finibus, inter arduos instaurandæ religionis & constituendæ politix labores, Musices admiratione & delectatione adeo sese non abdicasse, vt etiam seu numera precibus placaret, ipsius ipse gesta & beneficia celebraret, seu in sacris obeundis reliquorum choragum ageret, seu panegyricum epinicium ue
