

CHAPTER III.

§. I.

THe Abp. was present among Queen Jane's Counsellors, whose Party seemed to be resolute for her until the 19th of July. All these Persons of Quality were with her in the Tower, consulting of Affairs for her Service. And there being a Rising in Buckingham Shire and the Parts thereabouts, Queen Jane, thinking herself sure of Sir John Bridges and Sir Nicolas Poyntz, signed a Letter to them, therein ordering them, to raise with Speed all the Power they could, to alley that Tumult. And yet July the 20. divers of those very Counsellors, that but the Day before set their Hands, resolutely to stand by Q. Jane proclaimed Q. Mary in the City of London and immediately dispatched the Earl of Arundel and the Lord Paget unto her, with a Letter in which they beg her Pardon and assure her, that they were ever in their Hearts her true Subjects since the King's Death; but could not utter their Minds, before that Time without great Destruction and Bloodshed to themselves and others. The same Day the Council wrote to the
