

Handwritten text in Church Slavonic script, likely a liturgical or biblical passage. The text is written in a dense, cursive style on aged, yellowed paper. It features several large initial letters, possibly marking the beginning of new sections or verses. The script is characteristic of the Cyrillic alphabet used in the Balkans and Eastern Europe during the medieval period.