

Spring means a garden, and planting, but that is not all there is to Spring. It's just as imperative, just as necessary to transplant the furniture of the living-room as the seedlings of the greenhouse. You need lamps as well as crocuses, china as much as marigolds, crystal as well as pansies.

When the first gay blooms of spring-time arrive from the market gardener, long before your own are more than bursting seeds, then do you realize how many vases and pans, bowls and holders even one house addicted to the love of flowers should contain. And then do you realize why Ovington's shows so many holders for springtime's flowers.

The Vernal Sap Is Flowing

And Hostesses Are Brightening Up Their Homes

WHEN Spring with all her freshness makes a bow and enters on this scene of facts and fancies, then do thoughts of the home beyond the city begin to stir within the hostess, and she turns them to her decorative scheme. And before she dwells too long upon the needs of her living room and hallway, dining room and porch, the name of Ovington's comes naturally to mind, where, she knows, she can in one brief and happy visit get the score of things she wants to furnish up the summer domicile. And not in vain does that name come to her, for hostesses for many springs gone by have come here for the very selfsame things

For instance, there is china, which every hostess needs, and sparkling crystal for the table to make the setting "right." There are flower holders in a vast and pleasing range, to hold a single bud or a cluster of color, lamps to brighten up a corner and adorn a reading table, odd pieces of furniture to serve her, mirrors for a vacant wall, refreshment sets. There are a hundred other things that will be used a hundred times before summer runs its merry course. And a final point—one well worth the noting is that whatever strikes your fancy here at Ovington's will not deal a tremendous blow to your purse.
