

Charterhouse

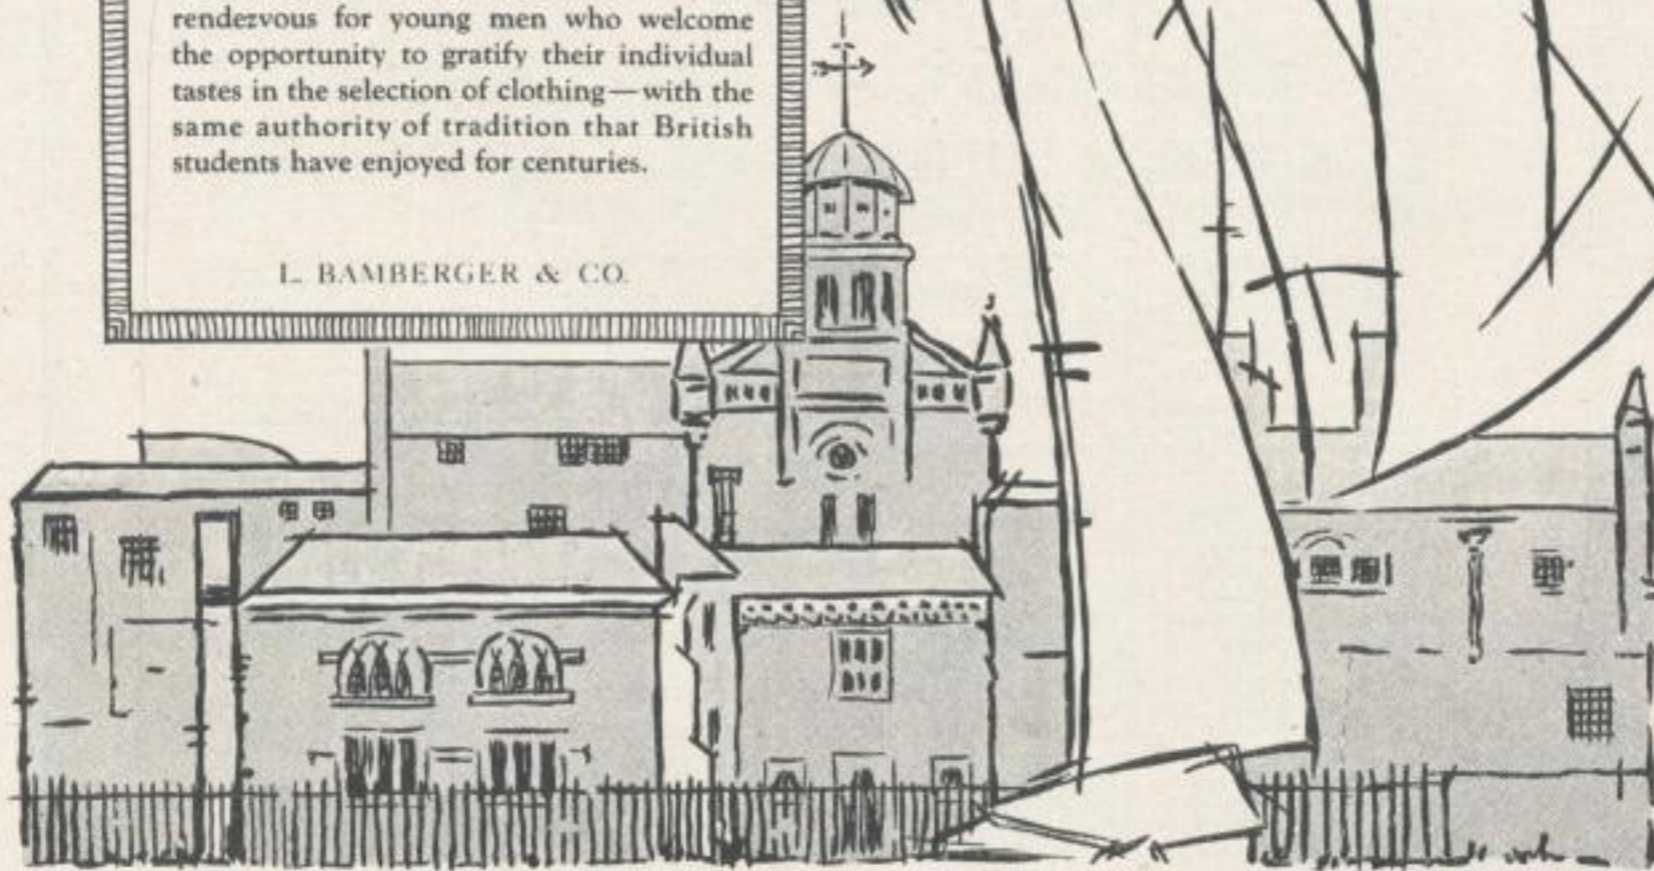

A Clothes Shop for School Men

CHARTER HOUSE—England's great school founded before the Cromwellian era, famous no less for its personalities than for its scholarship—has come to give the weight of tradition to American students in their dress.

For, in the Men's Clothing Section of L. Bamberger & Co., Charter House has just been opened—a special section, built in the early English manner. In it you will find collegiate cut clothing, bearing the Charter House label, tailored in the authentic mode of the 1926 college season.

The penchant for distinctive clothing; a bit swagger, a trifle nonchalant; expressive of freedom, originality and youth, is given widest rein here. Charter House will be a rendezvous for young men who welcome the opportunity to gratify their individual tastes in the selection of clothing—with the same authority of tradition that British students have enjoyed for centuries.
