

FOTOS: BOVO

GRIT KALLIN

To reproduce objectively what one sees, is the problem of the photographer. To find spiritual and atmospheric contents in what one sees and to translate these qualities into a new (created) form, is the problem of the artist. Grit Kallin is both. To her the camera is only a substitute for brush and pencil. Most essential in her photos is this individual translation.

