

WALTER
GOETZ
LONDON

"I had the first letter for twenty years from my brother in Australia."

"And what did he say?"

"I don't know. I sent it back unopened. There was no stamp on it."

Walter Goetz is a young and gifted caricaturist who lives in London. His work speaks for itself. Its humour appeals to us even without the accompanying textual witticism. Old Petronius, who was such a master in describing scenes of feasting, would have delighted in Goetz' picture of Roman augurs at a banquet. The thrifty Scot is effective just on account of his grotesque appearance. This is all because Goetz has humour at his finger's ends, like every born caricaturist.

Trans. by E. T. Scheffauer.

