

FROM A PAPER FACTORY

Commissioned by the "Freiberg Paper Factory in Weißenborn", Georg Fritz has made a series of drawings of the works and workshops. This kind of task is usually deputed to-day to the photographer. People have the idea that they will then obtain a particularly objective pictorial report, although we are all aware that the photographer can exaggerate just as crassly as any draughtsman. A good drawing will always have a better propaganda effect than a photograph. It is more vital, more personal and not only submits a report of the real facts of such a works but also gives us a far more vivid impression of the will to production that inspires the workers.

Georg Fritz' drawings are a good example of the value of such individual work.
