

Studies of Prof. Schneider's Class in Stuttgart
Student: Elsbeth Schwarz

types of talent at the moment among the pupils. For example, just now we have a young man who has an extraordinary technical gift, who does astonishingly good work as carver of woodcuts, type-setter and book-printer and who is quite absorbed in such work. Next to him two young girls are at work who have no other interest than building up illustrative designs in colour. Another pupil has occupied himself for years exclusively with problems of type and the get-up of books. Others work for months of research in the realm of constructive building-up which lies at the root of all advertising ideas. Others spend the whole summer in sketching and painting plant studies.