

Darstellung der alten und neuen Siedlungsform
 Illustration of old-fashioned and modern estate planning

GREINER-FLACH

Photo:
 Höhlig, Berlin

Plan". It is Dr. Hellmuth's conviction that whatever people may have done badly, must be in the power of people to repair.

Very few people in Germany are aware that there is a distressed area in that great stretch of territory which forms the triangle Aschaffenburg-Würzburg-Salzungen. The lovely landscape is well-known, with its groups of mountains rising to nearly 3000 ft, but usually only from the windows of the railway-carriage. We know the names of many fine spas belonging to the region, such as Bad Kissingen, Bocklet, Bad Orb, Bad Soden, and so on. Many visited them and were cured. The Rhön has become especially well-known of late years as the cradle of German gliding. The new sport, circling inside the big Rhön Weel, has been familiarized by sporting reporters. But other occurrences in this region had no connection with journalism — they were not perceived or were deliberately ignored.

This state of things made it necessary to acquaint the public with what was being planned.

The exhibition was so organised that in going round it, the visitor first received a complete survey of the historical development from the first primitive settlements to the present day. Very cleverly have all the conditions been demonstrated which led to misery and want, and immediately