

every specialist's territory has become a many-branched science, many subjects must necessarily remain a closed book to us. Thus there is always a great danger of our being faultily and disadvantageously served. Everyone knows the advantage of employing a firm of good reputation in which one can safely put one's trust. A good reputation is above all a consequence of work of quality. Quality is its own best advertiser. But such permeative recommendation takes its time. Charlatans' tricks win a quicker popularity; conscientious quality work is never "the talk of the town." But the best men of the time and the craft are aware of it. A good
