

reputation is never made at one blow: it must be gradually built up. When a house has built up and preserved its reputation for a whole century, then it has stood the test and we can put our trust in this good name and in the firm.

Appreciations of the achievements of the printing-house of A. Wohlfeld, Magdeburg, have repeatedly appeared in "Gebrauchsgraphik". A limited selection of their work should not be lacking on such a festive occasion. Even the outward aspect gives the connoisseur a lively impression of the high level of cultivated taste and the disciplined craftsmanship that distinguish this undertaking. The "Gebrauchsgraphik" and all friends of good German quality work in the printing trade wish further success and progress to the printing house of A. Wohlfeld of Magdeburg in the new century upon which it is now entering.
