When a man is able to make his village girls so typically a product of their surroundings, can visualize them with such an intensity of artistic perception and at the same time draw stylish women and smart cars, he is, from the point of view of commercial art, extremely capable. Oswald Voh's great versatility of technique and style is due to an exceptional ability to enter into the spirit of his subject and an artistic intensity of creative power. If one of his drawings of an animal recalls the modelling of a Sintenis or some of his earlier work even suggests
