

familiar sights with fresh eyes. That is the certain indication of pronounced artistic genius. Otto Georg Hitzberger is a Bavarian and comes of artistic stock. His father is a professor at the Berlin Academy of Art. Thus Hitzberger has the artistic tradition in his blood. This is recognizable in his work which shows a complete command of craftsmanship.

Hitzberger the artist goes his own independent way. That is demonstrated by the relief plastics, reproduced in this number, for a large Berlin restaurant business whose premises have been reconstructed by the architect A. Zimmer. It is a matter for congratulation that in restaurants place is found not only for the usual trash associated with the noisy atmosphere of beer-drinking, but that something is also done to give young and struggling artists a chance. For if art is to reach the people and to be closely associated with the people, it must also be found in places which serve the needs of everyday life.
