

In many cases it is merely the goods as such which only interest the beholder and attract him to the window-glass because he needs them and therefore looks for them in the show-window.

Ignorance of the most elementary principles of dealing with the available space, apportioning the surface and arranging the goods is solely to blame for wrong effect of the display in the shop-window. It is not everyone who possesses the talent of dealing with a