

of a summer morning, and when he can make man, with all his predestined connection with Nature, represent the idea underlying the picture. It is just such restrained illustrations that make the most permanent impression on the beholder owing to the delicacy of their colouring and the refined carefulness of their entire treatment.

Dr. Eberhard Hölscher.

M E I D

