Perturbation in the feathered world—heartburning in the aviary—a triangle upon the wing! She looks back—she regrets—she remembers—yet passion must have its due. He hardens his heart—hurt—angry—obstinately determined neither to understand nor to forgive . . . Well, anyhow, that's Jean Varda's explanation of his ingenious new design. He calls it "Inconstancy." It's call it a good design for drawing-room curtains.
