GERHARD MARGGRAFF

On comparing the examples of the work of the graphic artist, Gerhard Marggraff, which were reproduced some years ago in several of these issues, with what he has produced in recent years and of which we now show a large selection, a decided change in form is visible in the artist's work. This fact, however, finds its natural explanation in the artist's whole development. Gerhard Marggraff started his career as a painter and graphic artist, and so it was not surprising that his early work as an advertising artist should be executed more in the style of drawings and paintings which method, however, was soon replaced by stricter graphic forms.
