A closer inspection of the work of a group of collaborators will involuntarily give rise to the question, who did this and who did that? The Mallász - Dallos graphic work displays a harmony of style, thought and technique of such unique perfection that the one artist can finish the work started by the other without the effect being spoiled by evidences of disturbing differences in style. In summer the two artists explore the villages in search of new motifs for the coming season. What they reproduce is marked by spontaneity and charm. Frequently, if
