subtle discrimination of a high order, and in fact should only be used under the supervision of a layout expert. Only then do they exhibit their quaint charm, and become vital and arresting. A. Heubner has been entirely successful in grasping the fascination of xylographs. He must be reckoned among those advertising artists who have a fondness for unbeaten paths. He shows considerable skill in seizing upon romantic view-points while avoiding their pitfalls. His work is thus amazingly effective, and above all original. Trl. by Flora Salmund-Volkman
