

of National Propaganda commissioned him to make for the purpose of launching an appeal with a distinctly national note. Actually, Thomaz de Mello provided the idea himself, for as a man of vision and inventive genius, and above all as an artist keenly interested in folk-lore, he is an expert authority on the customs and traditions of his native land. In this capacity he

