

Sanitätssoldaten in vorderster Front
 Soldiers of the Ambulance Corps in the front line

A whole series of drawings today have contemporary happenings as their theme. Outstanding among these is some vigorous work by Ahlers' masterly hand. Virile and forceful are these drawings of his whatever his subject may be. Whether he depicts artillery operations or some drama enacted on board ship one instinctively feels that the artist has himself experienced what he draws. This is actually the case, for this talented draughtsman whose pencil depicts so skilfully the stirring events of the war has indeed been through them himself. Interesting above all is the fact that while a soldier in the World War Fritz Ahlers made drawings of many of the scenes he witnessed during its course. The picture heading this contribution dates from
