

of activity which in these days entails a considerable amount of responsibility. Harald Damsleth, who was born in Oslo, received the thorough training he enjoyed for the most part in Germany, although in addition, he travelled much for purposes of study and spent some time in France, England and America. As a student he attended for several years what was formerly the West Arts and Crafts School but is now the

