

Hugo Frank

gart where he has found permanent and congenial work, he had travelled far and seen much of the world. On completing his studies at the Arts and Crafts School in Stuttgart, where he was fortunate enough to have old Kolb as his master, he took up advertising art as his profession and achieved much success

Illustrationen aus der Zeitschrift „Stuttgarter Leben“

Illustrations from the periodical "Stuttgarter Leben"

in various German cities. After the Great War he worked for nearly fourteen years in Berlin and during his stay in that city contributed drawings to numerous magazines including "Fliegende Blätter" and "Westermanns Monatshefte" and soon established his fame as an illustrator of no mean repute. Frank travelled much in other countries. Eastern Europe, France and Italy are familiar ground to him. Above all he knows Northern Europe well