The village

The manufactory of the German Fashion Institute that on the very day of the outbreak of war moved into its spacious new quarters in Berlin-Lichterfelde owes its origin to Frau Maria May. In founding this new and unique institution with its practical and ideal aims Frau May had the support of the German textile industry. On the practical side the purpose of the manufactory is to stimulate interest by creating fascinating and lovely patterns for fabrics in faultless taste and designed by experts in addition to issuing periodical reports and colour charts of the textile industry. This is done with a view to extending an educative influence in this particular field of
