

At table, a man may with decency have a distinguishing palate;
but indiscriminate voraciousness degrades him to a glutton.

Chesterfield, letters to his son.

