

FOURTH ROOM.

THE SILVER-ROOM.

This room, the colour of which gave the name to the Green Vaults, contains an exquisite collection of vessels of solid gold, silver gilt, filigrane-work, ruby-glass and clocks made from the end of the XVIth to the beginning of the XVIIIth century. These vessels of various forms were formerly and are still used on state-occasions for sideboard ornaments or for ornamental buffets at the balls and galla-dinners of the Saxon Court.

On the table are placed a beautiful jewel-box or inkstand, decorated with diamonds and made by a French jeweller, and two astronomical clocks, made by a Venetian (No. 1) and (No. 3) a Saxon clockmaker: the name of the last was Andrews Schelhorn (1576).
