

Handwritten text in a medieval script, possibly Gothic or Carolingian minuscule, arranged in approximately 15 lines. The text is significantly obscured by large, irregular white blotches and holes, likely due to insect damage or water damage. The legible fragments include words such as "die", "in", "et", "et", "et", "et", "et", "et", "et", "et", "et", "et", "et", "et", "et", "et".