

This image shows a page of handwritten musical notation on aged, yellowed paper. The page contains 15 horizontal staves, each consisting of five lines. The notation is written in dark ink and includes various symbols such as dots, lines, and curved shapes, characteristic of early musical notation. There are several instances of faint, mirrored text visible through the paper, including the word "CANTATA" and the number "12.". The paper has a slightly irregular, torn edge on the right side.
